

ONE OF
THE WARNER FAMILY
IN AMERICA.

COMPILED BY ANDREW F. WARNER.

PRINTED FOR J. J. WARNER, BY
THE CASE, LOCKWOOD & BRAINARD CO., HARTFORD, CONN.
1892.

PREFACE.

THIS partial History of the Warner Family in America should more properly be called a skeleton history of that family, for the reason that a number of the principal Limbs must be restored and many branches added before it can take the name of the Family History, is printed to preserve the labors of that member of the family who devoted so many hours days and years of his short life in the examination of records and tombstones to collect the material for this work. He died before it was completed, and it has remained, if not lost, almost unknown to the present members of that family.

It is printed in the hope that it may fall into the hands of some member of the family in this or a future generation who will restore the missing limbs and prolong the branches and make it a complete history of the descendants of the first Warner who crossed the Atlantic and erected his family altar upon the soil of America. It is not inappropriate that the history of the family of the first Warner immigrant to America should be published by a descendant who was the first of that name to cross the continent and make a home and rear a family upon its western shore.

It will be observed that a few but incomplete additions have been made to the original manuscript by a continuation of descendants, chiefly from the first Selden Warner, but regardless of classification, by J. J. Warner, Los Angeles, California.

The following is an extract from an obituary of the compiler of this History, which was printed soon after his death in a Middletown, Connecticut, newspaper.

He was a son of Dr. Andrew F. Warner of Haddam. On the death of his father, which occurred when he was a child, he was transferred to the family of his uncle the late Dr. Richard Warner of Cromwell, from whom he received the care and kindness of a parent. In his youth he resided a few years in Hartford as a clerk. Afterward for a time in Rochester, but latterly in Cromwell.

He was much respected for his intelligence and enterprise and public spirit, qualities which led him to enter warmly into plans for the improvement, material, moral and intellectual, of the place where he resided. He was also much interested in the politics of the country, and his influence here was prominent and decided.

In his business he aimed to be upright and honorable, in social life he was genial and companionable. It should be added that he was a sincere believer in the truths of Christianity, and for many years a member of the Congregational Church. He died with calmness and resignation in the humble but assured exercise of the Christian's hope. His death will be much lamented as a public loss.
