The Genealogy of the Warner Family

ALTHOUGH SURNAMES were introduced into England by the Norman nobles and owners of estates circa 1066 when William, Duke of Normandy, led the Norman Conquest against King Harold, hereditary surnames were uncommon even in the twelfth century. It was not until the fourteenth century that the non-landholding classes took fixed surnames.

The family name of Warner is of Anglo-Saxon origin and is found in the earliest of English records. The line of ancestry is of French and ultimately of Germanic extraction, and the name may mean either "defence-army" or "true-army." An English document of the twelfth century records the name in its Latinized form of "Warnerus," and other ancient derivatives are Warn, Warnerd, Warrener and Warriner. There are two distinct theories in regard to the name of Warner: one is from an official source, and the other is from a baptismal source. In an official sense, the "warrener" was a keeper of a warren house or manor—preserved territory for rabbits, hares, fish, etc.—and from this source we hear of Richard le Warner, County of Cambridge, 1273, in the Hundred Rolls (County Court Records), and of Jack le Warner, County of Norfolk. If we consider that Warner came from a baptismal origin, we hear of Warner Buckston, County of Hampshire, in the Hundred Rolls, and of Wariner le Bolton.

The history of Norfolk county occupies a unique position in the annals of England. Boadicea ruled over what is now Norfolk, and she defended her domain against the Emperor Nero in 61 A.D. In 519 the Kingdom of East Anglia was established on the east coast of England by the Angles who had arrived from Sleswick in Northern Germany (where there is still a district called Angeln), and this was later divided into two provinces: Northfolc (Norfolk) and Suthfolc (Suffolk). In the year 596 Gregory the Great, Bishop of Rome, became interested in the eastern section of England, and he sent the missionary named Augustine to assist with the introduction of Christianity to the Angles and Saxons and to convert the English. Augustine landed in Kent county, and later became the first Archbishop of Canterbury.

The earliest home of the Warners in England is believed to have been at Great Waltham, Essex county, where a settlement was founded in Saxon days. In the reign of Henry III. of England there is mention of one Henri le Warn, and in the records of Crokerdon Abbey in 1302 the name of Ythel le Warner occurs. Warners were to be found at an early date in the counties of Essex, Suffolk, Hampshire, Leicester, Norfolk, Kent, Middlesex, and in London. Of the Essex line, Edmund Warner, Esq., had an estate in the eastern part of the county which was known as "Warner Hall" in the year 1360. In 1609 a John Warner was living in Hatfield Broad Oak—about ten miles from Waltham, and his son, Andrew, assisted with the founding of a colony in Hartford, Connecticut, U.S.A., before 1639. Early colonial records show that Andrew Warner lived an active and influential life in Hartford, and his name is chiselled amongst numerous other names on a huge brown monument which was erected many years ago to perpetuate the memory of the first settlers of that city. This venerable monument is well weather-beaten, and it is located in an old cemetery in the centre of the business section of the city.

The heraldic insignia of the Samuel Warner lineage of Baconsthorpe, Norfolk county, England, are as follows:—

ARMS—vert, a cross engrailed or.

CREST—out of a ducal coronet or, a double plume of feathers or.

MOTTO—Spero. (I hope)

The ducal coronet in the crest implies that a dukedom existed in the family at an early period.

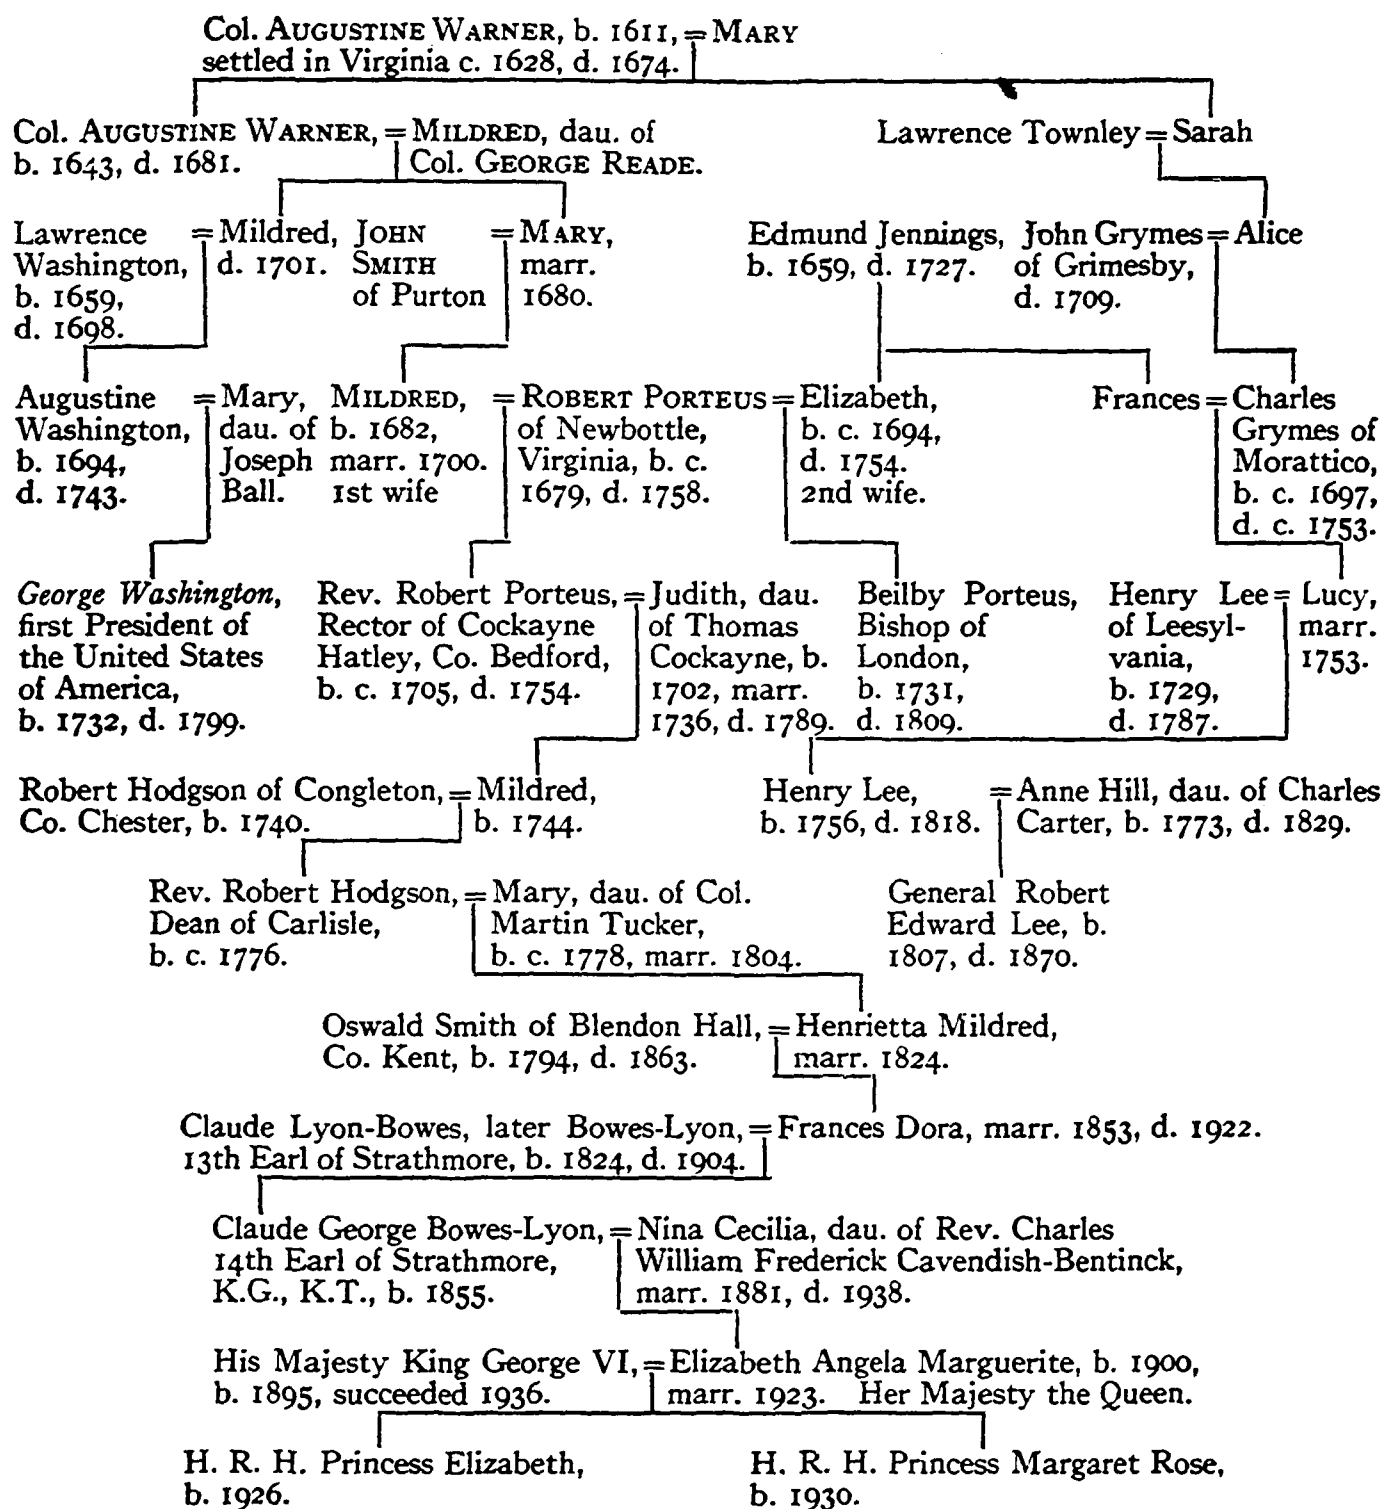

The first family by the name of Warner to come to the New World (North American Continent) is believed to have been Colonel Augustine Warner (b. 1611; d. 1674) and he settled in York county, State of Virginia, U.S.A., about the year 1628. He later moved to Gloucester county in Virginia, and lived and was buried on the estate which came to be known as "Warner Hall." By his wife, Mary, he had a daughter, Sarah, who was the ancestress of Robert Edward Lee (b. January 19, 1807; d. October 12, 1870), a general whose name has long been revered in the pages of American Civil War history. General Lee married Mary Ann Randolph Custis, the only daughter of George Washington Parke Custis (grandson of Martha Dandridge-Custis and adopted son of her second husband, General George Washington, by whom there was no issue). Colonel Warner brought his family crest and coat-of-arms with him to America and, while the crest differs slightly, the heraldic arms are identical with those of the Samuel Warner family of Baconsthorpe, Norfolk county, England. His son, Colonel Augustine Warner, Jr. (b. 1643; d. 1681), was Speaker of the Virginia House of Burgesses in 1676 and he married Mildred, daughter of Colonel George Reade. By this marriage there was a daughter, Mildred (d. 1701) who married Lawrence Washington (b. 1659; d. 1698) and their son, Augustine Washington (b. 1694; d. 1743), married (firstly) Jane Butler and (secondly) Mary, daughter of Joseph Ball. Augustine Washington and Mary Ball Washington were the parents of six children, and the eldest was George Washington (b. February 22, 1732; d. December 14, 1799) who subsequently became the First President of the United States of America. General George Washington was born near Fredericksburg, in Westmoreland county, Virginia, on the estate of his father. This property is between Bridge's Creek and Pope's Creek, and it was eventually known as "Wakefield." The place is non-existent now, but a recording stone, with inscription, marks the locality. His great-great-great-grandfather, Lawrence Washington, and other relatives, however, owned and occupied "Sulgrave Manor" which is set on the borders of the small Village of Sulgrave, County of Northampton, England. This picturesque Elizabethan and Jacobean manor house is located south-east of Stratford-on-Avon, in the heart of rural England, and Lawrence Washington purchased it from Henry VIII. in the year 1539; it remained in possession of the family until 1659. The Washington coat-of-arms were carved at an early date upon the right spandrel of the stone archway of the Elizabethan entrance porch, where one may see them at the present time; they consist of two bars with three mullets (i.e. stars), and this is the reputed origin of the American "Stars and Stripes." Warner Washington, Sr., was a first cousin of George Washington and he lived at Fairfield, Virginia, where he died in 1791. These two cousins were close friends and they often visited each other. There is a record that Warner Washington was a guest of his distinguished cousin at the stately "Mount Vernon" mansion (the historic national site upon the banks of the Potomac river) on February 28 and March 1, 1773. "Mount Vernon" originally consisted of four thousand acres and it was bequeathed to George Washington by his elder half-brother, Lawrence.

From the parish registers and register bills of the Village of Baconsthorpe, Norfolk county, England, it has been possible to locate complete extracts relating to baptismal dates, also marriage and burial records pertaining to the widow and family of Samuel Warner, Jr., which emigrated to Canada and settled in the Town of Prescott, Township of Augusta, County of Grenville, Ontario. Directly after the death of Samuel Warner, Jr., in 1842, his widow and her six small children sailed for Canada to establish a new home. It is quite authentic that she was a sister of Austen Fox who lived near Keeler's Corners (between "Third Concession" road and Haley's school-house) in Augusta township. A direct line of male descendants of the Fox family continues to live at their old homestead, and it is presumed that Austen Fox came from Norfolk county, England, to that section of the country only a short time previous to the arrival of his sister.

Stephen Warner of Swanton Abbott (near North Walsham), Norfolk county, England, was the father of Samuel Warner, Sr., and his marriage to Elizabeth Banyer is recorded as taking place on October 3, 1768. He is one of the earliest of the progenitors to appear in the lineal chronological chart, and his administration was granted in the Norwich Archdeaconry Court in 1788-1789.

Samuel Warner, Sr. (b. circa 1785; buried in Baconsthorpe on February 10, 1863), was married (firstly) to Mary Chapman and by this marriage there were three children: Samuel (baptised March 19, 1810), William (baptised January 2, 1814), and Mary (baptised May 12, 1822). The mother's death occurred on January 30, 1826, aged 43 years, and Samuel Warner, Sr., was married (secondly) as follows:—

"Marriage—Samuel Warner, widower, of Baconsthorpe, and Rebecca Browne, singlewoman, of Hempstead, near Holt, on the 11th day of October, 1827." To this second union there was born a daughter, Rebecca, but she died December 7, 1833, aged 1 year and 3 months. Rebecca, wife of Samuel Warner, died in Baconsthorpe on January 15, 1852, aged 59 years.

Samuel Warner, Jr., singleman, and Mary Fox, singlewoman, both of Baconsthorpe, were married and lived in Baconsthorpe where their six children were born, namely:—

William (baptised July 29, 1832).

James (baptised May 15, 1834).

Samuel (baptismal date not entered in Baconsthorpe registers).

Betsy (baptised August 9, 1840).

Thomas (baptised August 9, 1840).

Frances (baptised December 18, 1842).

It is assumed that Mary, the only daughter of Samuel Warner, Sr., and Mary Chapman, did not marry. Her brother, William, married (firstly) Alice (?) and their two children were: Mary Ann

MRS. SAMUEL WARNER
Married later to Joseph Merrington of Prescott

[restored from an old charcoal drawing]

(baptised September 22, 1839), and John (baptised February 13, 1842). William married (secondly) Ellen (?) who was born at Swanton Abbott in the year 1816, and their son, William, was born in 1850. William Warner's three children were born in Baconsthorpe, but the family later moved to West Beckham, Norfolk county.

The following family records of the genealogical line from Baconsthorpe appertain to the six children of Samuel Warner, Jr. (b. March 17, 1810; died in Baconsthorpe, Norfolk county, October 9, 1842), and his wife, Mary Fox (b. 1811; died in Prescott, Ontario, February 23, 1873):—

William Warner (b. June 1, 1832; d. December 29, 1918) married January 25, 1859, Ann Read (b. November 16, 1827; d. April 12, 1914), and they were pioneer settlers in Hastings, Ontario, Canada, where many of their descendants live at the present time. Ann Read was the fourth daughter of Guy Carleton Read (b. June 16, 1785; d. December 5, 1849) and his first wife, Anna Buell. His father, Obadiah Read, and his grandfather, Moses Read, had been persecuted and imprisoned by the Revolutionists in the American War of Independence (1775-1783) and, consequently, they left the family home in Salisbury, Connecticut, U.S.A., and came to Canada with the United Empire Loyalists in 1784. They settled in South Augusta, Ontario, on their land which is now known as "Rock Ledge" and where one may see an historic colonial farmhouse. The fine old stone home was built in the year 1823 and by the same people who built the Hurd house (Howison place), with its exquisite example of cut-stone masonry, at Stone's Corners, Ontario. It is situated beside a constant-flowing water-spring, and a legend tells us that this was the deciding factor which prompted the "loyalist newcomers" to build at that point on the rocky ledge. The "square and compasses" fraternal emblem is chiselled on the face of the date-stone immediately above the central doorway leading to the main section of the Guy Read homestead, and this indicates that the older generations of the family were either brethren or admirers of the Craft. Masonic meetings of the early Jarvis Lodge, No. 26, Augusta, first met in Jehial Hurd's tavern at Stone's Corners (in the adjacent vicinity) from 1815 to 1822; this was the original stone house on the present William R. Collier farm which was built in 1805, and which was burnt to the ground on August 14, 1919. Guy Carleton Read (1785-1849) was the father of Guy Carleton Read (b. July 3, 1814; d. May 17, 1898), a brother of Mrs. William Warner, and an unbroken lineage of male heirs has continued at the ancestral estate throughout the past century and a half. Ann Read was born in the old home at the farm, "Rock Ledge," which is within view of the dignified and pretentious dwelling, "Readholme." This latter stone house was built in the year 1808 and by Obadiah Read, the grandfather of Mrs. William Warner. It is located on a corner of land across the roadway from the property that the Read family opened up for burial purposes, and their name was applied to the cemetery that has existed for many generations. "Readholme" was inherited by Moses Read, an uncle of Mrs. William Warner, and his son, Samuel, and succeeding descendants have periodically occupied the substantial mansion during the intervening years. George Read of Keene, Ontario, was a brother of Ann Read, and a member of the Ontario Provincial Legislature for several years. John Landon Read, a brother of Guy Carleton Read (1785-1849), was present at the taking of Ogdensburg, N.Y., during the War of 1812-1814, and he married (March 9, 1799) Janet Breakenridge for his first wife. She was the eldest daughter of Colonel David Breakenridge and his wife Hester (?), as well as a sister of Mrs. John Morey. Their son, David Breakenridge Read, Q.C., author and historian, was mayor of the City of Toronto in 1858. The Reverend Canon William Ashley Read (son of William Case Read and Margaret McKenzie), long of the Anglican Diocese of Ottawa, was a grandson of John Landon Read.

James Warner (b. April 20, 1833; d. February 24, 1895) married Eliza Jane Morey (b. June 24, 1831; d. December 1, 1916). They established their home at "Norfolk Hall," South Augusta (north of Maitland and six miles from Brockville), in the year 1872, and a direct line of male descendants still retain their residence there. Other descendants live in Brockville, Ontario, and the State of New York, U.S.A.

Samuel Warner (b. May 24, 1837; d. December 17, 1909) and Eliza Gostlin (b. January 6, 1841; d. November 8, 1918) were married in Brockville, Ontario, July 4, 1860, and they founded a home in Wadsworth, Ohio, U.S.A., where the majority of their family now reside.

Betsy Warner (b. 1839; d. November 18, 1869) married John Ward (b. June 30, 1846; d. July 31, 1884), and they lived in Prescott, Ontario, without issue.

Thomas Warner (b. February 14, 1840; d. April 26, 1919), a cripple throughout his lifetime, married March 10, 1869, Martha Sternes (b. September 12, 1841; d. July 19, 1915). Their home was always in Prescott, Ontario, and their descendants now live in

FRANCES (Fannie) WARNER

Married (firstly) John Ward and (secondly) Jackson Ward

Montreal, Quebec. The Sternes family lived at Easton's Corners, Ontario, and Mrs. Thomas Warner spent her girlhood days there.

Frances (Fannie) Warner (b. March 23, 1842; d. February 23, 1922) married (firstly) March 21, 1870, her brother-in-law, John Ward (b. June 30, 1846; d. July 31, 1884) left no issue. Married (secondly) Jackson Ward, and they lived in "The Fort Town" (Prescott) without issue.

Mrs. Mary Warner (widow of Samuel Warner, Jr.) later married Joseph Merrington (b. 1788; d. January 2, 1880), one of the pioneer citizens of Prescott, Ontario, and they lived there continuously where three children were born to them. These three members of the family died early in life and unmarried. Their names were as follows:—

Eliza (b. 1853; d. December 8, 1879).

Crisanah (b. 1854; d. March 8, 1874).

Joseph (b. 1859; d. December 8, 1883).

The musical ability of members of the Warner family is hereditary and has been prominently emphasized in many cases. The talent is quite pronounced in the Canadian and American branches of the lineage, and it may be traced to Samuel Warner, Jr., of Baconsthorpe, who played the violin and who died at the early age of thirty-two years. An article was prepared by the author of this genealogy, and it is cited for a direct reference on the subject. This compilation on music in the various generations of the family is entitled "A Bit of Canadian Folklore," and it appeared in the historical publication "Americana Illustrated," (Vol. XXXVI, No. 4) October, 1942. One quotation from the article is as follows: "He (Samuel Warner) was a noted violinist in the early days of the reign of Queen Victoria, and a family legend asserts that his violin was destroyed directly after his untimely death."

Samuel Warner, Jr. (d. October 9, 1842) is buried in the Village of Baconsthorpe, County of Norfolk, England. This village is located in the Parish of North Norfolk and near Cromer. It consists of a population of approximately three hundred residents and is situated three miles south-east of Holt.

The entire Merrington family is buried in the Sandy Hill Cemetery, Prescott, Ontario, and the Ward families and the older generations of the Thomas Warner branch of the lineage are also buried there.

The graves of William Warner and his wife, Ann Read, are located in their family burial-plot in the Trent Valley Cemetery, Hastings, Ontario.

Samuel Warner and his wife, Eliza Gostlin, are interred in Woodlawn Cemetery, Wadsworth, Ohio, U.S.A. All other members of their lineage who have passed on are buried there also.

The James Warner generation is interred in Read's Cemetery, South Augusta, Ontario, and the parents of Mrs. James Warner (Mr. and Mrs. John Morey of United Empire Loyalist descent) are buried there as well. Colonel David Breakenridge (d. April 8, 1833, in his 70th year) was the father of Mrs. John Morey (Harriet), and he was an original United Empire Loyalist from Bennington, Vermont, U.S.A., who settled on a grant of land (date of Patent—May 17, 1802) near Maitland, Augusta township, Ontario. His appointment to the office of magistrate was amongst the first in Upper Canada. He was a staunch adherent to the early Methodist Church in Grenville county, Ontario, where he exerted his influence as a class leader, and he officiated at the funeral service of Barbara Heck (Foundress of Methodism in British North America) in the old Blue Church Cemetery, near Prescott, Augusta township, in the month of August, 1804. In 1811 the eminent American pioneer ecclesiastic, Bishop Asbury, visited Canada, and he was an overnight guest of Colonel David Breakenridge in his home at Maitland when proceeding on his journey from the residence of the Heck family in Augusta township to preach at Lyn and to visit the Bay of Quinte District. The scattered hamlet of Johnstown is due east of Prescott and near the celebrated site of "The Battle of the Windmill" (November 13, 1838), and it was in this small frontier village, as well as in Brockville, that Colonel David Breakenridge presided for many years as Chairman of the Quarter Sessions. Johnstown was the judicial seat and capital of the old Eastern District, and later of the Johnstown District from 1792 to 1808, before this "Capital" was transferred to Brockville in the year 1808. The administration of the district was by justices of the peace who met four times a year, and it was from these quarterly sittings that the term "Quarter Sessions" arose. Colonel James Breakenridge (d. June 17, 1816) was a brother of David, and he lived on a grant of land near Lyn, Township of Elizabethtown, County of Leeds, where he was Colonel of the First Regiment of Leeds Militia (1796). Colonel David Breakenridge and his son-in-law, John Morey (b. 1800; d. September 26, 1876), attended the early Masonic meetings of the old Jarvis Lodge, No. 26, Augusta, which met in Jehial Hurd's house and which was the first lodge to be organized (1815) by Ziba Marcus Phillips (b. July 16, 1787; d. September, 1847). John Morey was a member of this lodge, having received the ceremony of his initiation there on January 31, 1822; he was also one of the officials that comprised the reception committee which formally welcomed King Edward VII. (as Prince of Wales) to the Town of Brockville, Ontario, September 3-4, 1860. Henry Breakenridge Morey (b. April 1, 1828; d. December 11, 1900), a resident of South Augusta during his entire lifetime, was a brother of Mrs. James Warner, and his wife, Marcia Hurd (b. January 14, 1831; d. May 31, 1906), was a grandniece of Jehial Hurd (an early magistrate who died in 1829, aged 68 years). Their only son was Sherman Morey (b. 1855; d. 1918) and he married Janet Read (b. 1857; d. 1917), a daughter of Guy Carleton Read (1814-1898) and his second wife, Clarinda Stewart (b. December 22, 1828; d. July 20, 1915). Extensive historical research anent the heraldry and United Empire Loyalist pedigree of the Breakenridge-Morey families has been traced by a great-granddaughter of Colonel David Breakenridge, Mrs. Murray Whiting Ferris of New York City, N.Y., and by a great-great-grandson, W. Allan Odell of Montreal, P.Q. Mrs. D. M. Fitzsimmons (Mrs. Charles Fitzsimmons), a resident of England since 1915, has also made a comprehensive study of the U. E. L. ancestry and lineal descent of the Breakenridge, Morey and Hurd families. Mrs. Murray Whiting Ferris (Edith Mary Thrall, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jason Howard Thrall of Almonte and Ottawa, Canada), Mrs. D. M. Fitzsimmons (Dorcas MacAllister Morey, daughter of "H. B." and Marcia Morey), and the writer of this "Genealogy of the Warner Family" are enrolled amongst the members of the United Empire Loyalists' Association of Canada (Toronto). Mrs. Ferris has been honoured with a certificate of life membership in this order, in which the prescribed jewel is the King George III. "U. E. L." insignia surmounted by the royal cypher and British Imperial Crown and suspended from a ribbon with identification bar.
