THE Welles family has been traced back to the Vaux family which derived its name from a district in Normandy. The name comes from Norman-French val, or vale, and its plurals, vals or vaux, from the Latin vallis. The orthography passed through many changes: Wallys (1220), Wellys (1475), Wyllys (1463), De Well (1401-89), De Welles, Welles (1293), and Wells. The Vaux family is of record in Provence as early as 794, and is recognized as one of the most illustrious in history, having from that period held the highest rank in its own right and by royal intermarriages. Harold de Vaux, a near connection of William the Conqueror, founded the family in England about 1120. He was accompanied by his three sons, Barons Hubert, Ranulph, and Robert, all surnamed de Vallibus.

Robert de Welles, born about 1145, was the great-grandson of Robert de Vallibus. He held the manor of Little Rayne, in Essex, England, and was the founder of the Welles family in that county. There were numerous branches of the family founded in England and, wealthy and powerful in their own right, their marriages were with the leading families of the realm, among these that of Dymoke, in which is held the title of Hereditary Champion of the King of England.

Hugh de Welles, a descendant of Jocelyn de Welles, the Fleming, became one of the most important men in England. Advanced to the See of Lincoln as Archdeacon, and Lord Chancellor of England, his power became very great. He was chief of the Barons and was instrumental in obtaining from King John, in 1215, the great Magna Charta, prepared by his own hand in 1207. He appears to have been in very close alliance with and in the confidence of King John. Wells Cathedral, in Somersetshire, in its present form, was begun by Bishop Joscelyn de Welles, brother of Bishop Hugh de Welles, before the middle of the thirteenth century. The Bishopric seals of both are attached to the Magna Charta. Recorded history and family traditions agree in stating that all of the name Welles and Wells who emigrated to the American colonies during the seventeenth century were from the county of Essex, England.

I

THOMAS WELLES, the American founder of the line of Welles herein recorded, was of the Essex County, England, branch of the family, resident on an estate and manor known as Welles Hall, first called Rayne Hall. He was born in London, England, about 1598, son of Thomas Welles, and came to America as the private secretary of Lord Say and Seal, early in 1636. His lordship returned to England, but Thomas Welles, with his company, proceeded up the Connecticut River to Hartford, Connecticut. He appears for the first time of record in Hartford in 1637, in which year he was chosen one of the magistrates of the Colony. This office he held every successive year until his death at Wethersfield, Connecticut, January 14, 1660. The magistrates at this time constituted the highest legislative and judicial tribunal in the Colony. In 1639, on the full organization of the Colonial Government, he was chosen treasurer of the Colony, the first ever elected, and he held that office until other excessive duties compelled him to resign it. In 1643 he was chosen Secretary of State. In 1649 he was selected as one of the two commissioners to represent Connecticut in the Confederation of the New England Colonies. In 1654 Governor Haynes, the first Governor of Connecticut, died, and Deputy-Governor Hopkins was absent in England. The Colony was thus without a chief magistrate, and Thomas Welles was called upon to discharge that duty until the annual election. At the annual election he was chosen Deputy-Governor, and in the following year, 1655, he was elected Governor. In this early period of our history, such was the popular vigilance and jealousy, no man was allowed to hold the office of Governor two years in succession. In 1656, therefore, he was chosen Deputy-Governor, and in 1658 again elected Governor; in 1659 Deputy-Governor (the second Winthrop, son of the old Governor Winthrop, of Massachusetts, being Governor), and died in office. He is represented throughout as having been one of the most estimable and exemplary men of the Colony, and of having to an unlimited extent, the confidence of the people. He was considered one of the best writers of the Colony, and it is said most of the early laws and papers were drafted by him. He was also regarded as one of the wealthiest, if not the most wealthy gentleman, of the Colony, and paid the largest amount of taxes.

Governor Welles married (first), in England, about 1618, Elizabeth Hunt, who died in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1640. Elizabeth (Hunt) Welles was a descendant of Sir Thomas de Hunt, of renown in 1366, at Stoke Dau-benny, in the County of Rutland, which is the smallest shire in England, lying between Lincolnshire and Northamptonshire. She came to America with her husband in 1636, but unable to endure the severe climate of New England and the hardships of a pioneer life, died at Hartford, Connecticut, in 1640. Governor Thomas Welles married (second) Mrs. Elizabeth (Deming) Foote, daughter of John Deming, of England, and widow of Nathaniel Foote, of Wethersfield, Connecticut. She died July 28, 1683, at an advanced age. There were no children by this marriage.

1. Ann, married (first), April 14, 1646, Thomas Thompson, of Farmington, Connecticut; married (second) Anthony Hawkins.
2. John, married Elizabeth Curtiss or Elizabeth Bourne, or possibly both. He died in 1659.
3. Robert, died about 1658, without issue.
4. Thomas, married, June 23, 1654, Mrs. Hannah (Tuttle) Pantry, of Boston, Massachusetts, widow of Thomas Pantry. He was the largest and tallest man of his time, residing in Hartford. He was quartermaster and deputy-magistrate.

6. Sarah, born 1631; married Captain John Chester.
7. Mary, died about 1656.

II

HON. SAMUEL WELLES, son of Governor Thomas and Elizabeth (Hunt) Welles, was born at Rothwell, Northamptonshire, England, about 1630, and died at Wethersfield, Hartford County, Connecticut, July 15, 1675. He resided at Hartford until 1649, when he removed to Wethersfield, and resided on the place originally purchased by his father, on the east side of the Connecticut River. He took the freeman's oath, at Hartford, in 1657; was ensign 1658; lieutenant 1665; captain 1670; deputy magistrate at Hartford from 1657 to 1662, and again in 1675. He was also a member of the General Assembly. He is supposed to have been drowned in the Connecticut River, or to have been killed by Indians. He married (first), in 1659, Elizabeth Hollister, daughter of John and Joanna (Treat) Hollister. (See Hollister II.) She died in 1673. In 1675 he married (second) Hannah Lambertson, daughter of George Lambertson, of New Haven, Connecticut. There were no children by this marriage.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL WELLES, son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Hollister) Welles, was born April 13, 1660, and died August 28, 1731, in his seventy-second year. Having inherited his father's lands on the east side of the Connecticut River, he removed there and became one of the pioneers of Glastonbury. In 1684 he sold land which his wife had inherited from her father to Eleazer How; which "12½ acres is a quarter part of a House lot given and granted by the town of Marlboro' aforesaid to Mr. Edmund Rice, my wife's father, and by him willed to her—his whole Homestead or Houselot being fiftie acres." Samuel signed his name and Ruth made her mark, "R." Samuel Welles married Ruth Rice, born September 29, 1659, died March 20, 1742, in her eighty-third year. She was a daughter of Deacon Edmund Rice and his second wife Mercie. (See Rice II.)

He was colonel of the Militia for some years, and was chosen Representative forty-two times. He is supposed to have been twice married, his second wife being the mother of his children. V

CAPTAIN JONATHAN WELLES, son of Thomas and Martha (Pitkin) Welles, was born in Glastonbury, Connecticut, August 9, 1732, and died there January 27, 1792, in his sixtieth year. He graduated at Yale College in 1751. During the year 1753-54 he taught the Hopkins Grammar School in New Haven, Connecticut, and then, until April, 1756, served as a tutor in Yale College. He settled on a farm, also built and maintained a store near his residence, and married a sister of his classmate, Rosewell Saltonstall. He was sent to the General Assembly in 1760 and to twenty-six subsequent sessions during the next twenty years. In 1770 he was made a captain in the Militia, and in 1773 received a commission as justice of the peace. He married, in 1758, Catharine Saltonstall, born about 1737, died March 11, 1818, in her eighty-first year, daughter of Rosewell and Mary Glover (Haynes-Lord) Saltonstall. (See Saltonstall V.)

7. Catharine, married Colonel Elisha Hale, of Glastonbury, Connecticut.
8. Mary, died unmarried in 1832 at the home of her brother Jonathan.

VI

JONATHAN WELLES, JR., son of Jonathan and Catharine (Saltonstall) Welles, was born in Glastonbury, Connecticut, December 21, 1763, and died there April 24, 1853, aged eighty-nine years and three months. He is described by his son as being a man of heavy build, iron constitution, and of great strength, the sole support his widowed mother, two sisters, and three orphaned children of a younger brother, in addition to his own family. Until his death, during his ninetieth year, he was a man who had no relaxation. He divided his time between the management of his farm and the discharge of public duties, and continued to do a full day's work in the field until he was more than eighty years of age. He also continued to mount his horse "from the ground" until he had passed his eightieth year. He was a constable and collector of taxes for the whole town for more than twenty years, served all civil processes, levied executions, arrested criminals, attended Court and the Legislature, and afterwards acted as town clerk and justice of the peace, until retired, being disqualified by the statutory limit of seventy years. It is said of him that:

He had been so long before the public, in an official capacity, that he was known to everybody in the town. The people had come to regard him with a feeling akin to reverence. His words were heard and obeyed without hesitation. When he was seen coming they knew it meant business; particularly those who were under judgment and feared a levy of execution; or who had committed offenses against the criminal laws. He feared nothing. No one dared to resist arrest.

Jonathan Welles, Jr., married, in Boston, Massachusetts, December 10, 1818, Jerusha Welles, his second cousin, a woman of unusual knowledge and intellect, born October 15, 1780, died January 3, 1848, daughter of John Welles, Jr.

Children:

1. Rosewell Saltonstall, died in infancy.
2. Henry Titus, of whom further.
3. Thomas, died in infancy.

Jerusha H. (Lord) Welles.

John Welles, Jr., aforementioned, was a first cousin of Jonathan Welles, Jr., being a grandson of Thomas and Martha (Pitkin) Welles. (Welles IV.) He was born September 2, 1754, married, and among his children were:

1. Titus, who resided in Boston, Massachusetts, and was for twenty-nine years president of the Eagle Bank, of Boston.
2. A daughter, who married Thomas Hubbard.
3. Jerusha, who married Jonathan Welles, Jr.

VII

HENRY TITUS WELLES, son of Jonathan and Jerusha (Welles) Welles, was born in the town of Glastonbury, Connecticut, April 3, 1821, and died in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 4, 1898. His early home was the home of his ancestors, a large farm abutting on the Connecticut River. The house in which he lived with his father and invalid mother was of the type so common during the late eighteenth century. Built on a generous scale, the doors were so large that eight-foot logs for the huge fireplaces were drawn in by a team of horses, the team being guided out through another door after the logs had been rolled into the cavernous fireplaces. He received his early education in the district schools of the community, which he attended for the first time when he was but four years of age. When he was eight years old he entered the Glastonbury Academy, and during the following year began the study of Greek and Latin at a conference school near Glastonbury. The four succeeding years were spent alternately at the Farmington Academy, the Conference School, and the Glastonbury Academy. In September, 1837, at the age of sixteen, he matriculated at Washington (now Trinity) College, and during his entrance examinations surprised the professors and instructors by his unusual proficiency in Greek and Latin. While at college he further distinguished himself in the languages and in literature, and was graduated with the class of 1843. Due to his excellent scholastic record, Mr. Welles was honored by election to the famous Phi Beta Kappa society. He was also a member of Beta Beta Chapter of Psi Upsilon, one of the foremost of the Greek letter fraternities of National scope.

Upon the completion of his college course, Mr. Welles returned to his home at Glastonbury and spent the following ten years in devoting every endeavor and all his energy toward making the final years of his aged father and mother comfortable and happy. During this time he began the study of law under the expert tutelage of Judge George Merrick, one of the most prominent jurists of his day, and was admitted to the bar of Hartford County, Connecticut, in the year 1845. He at once began the practice of law and was soon appointed a justice of the peace. Mr. Welles' political affiliations were with the Whig party, for which party and for whose views he was an ardent advocate. In the year 1850 he was honored by election to the State Legislature, and although in ill health during the greater part of his incumbency, he served his county well and discharged his duties with his usual efficiency. Always a clear thinker, with a well defined critical and judicial sense, and with an amount of knowledge amounting to erudition, his forensic ability was at once concise, autonomous, and out of the ordinary, and placed him on a par with many of the older speakers of the State Assembly.

Mr. Welles, in his later years, became a writer of distinctive ability and originality. His published works include two volumes of "Autobiography and Reminiscences," a volume entitled "A Miscellany," and two correlated volumes entitled "Uncut Leaves" and "Open Leaves," all of which, unfortunately, are not for general perusal, but were limited editions and are only to be found in private libraries and collections. In his "Reminiscences," Mr. Welles proves himself to be a master of the direct, conversational style of writing, revealing a natural pellucidity and charm for which most authors struggle and never attain. In his preface to the first volume of his "Reminiscences," Mr. Welles sets forth his views clearly and concisely, but from such an illuminating, unusual and plausible angle that the inclusion of the preface in its entirety is deemed worthy and advisable.

For my own diversion in leisure hours, and for the entertainment of my immediate family and near friends, the following pages have been written. The public would have little or no interest in the contents; and for that reason they will only be printed—not published. All the facts stated are within my own observation and experience, except such as are derived from authentic sources and not known to me of my own knowledge. Many little things unworthy of public mention will be noticed; but it is hoped that to friendly ears they will add zest to the book.

When we write for the public we are apt to think how it will read; how it will look to the eyes of the world. We fear the critic. We do not give to our thoughts natural and exact expression. We sacrifice truth to taste. We smother the idea with redundancy. We dress it in a garb whose colors please the fancy of others. We borrow words and phrases, afraid to appear in our own homely attire. Therefore it is well to write for one's self first, and then for our family and friends. Thinking too much of what others have said, do say, or will say about us, is a wear and tear of the nervous system. It makes writing for publication laborious. It exhausts the nerve-force. It is a waste of energy. Instead of traveling along at an easy pace, in a pathway of our own, we are impelled to go by crossroads, over hills, across gulches; to dodge behind trees and rocks; by a fear of the ruthless, irresponsible reviewer, oftentimes more presumptuous than intelligent.

During the decade that elapsed after his graduation from Trinity College, while he was at home engaged in the practice of law, Mr. Welles made a trip to New York City to visit a friend. He describes a part of his trip as follows:

Mr. Taylor took me in an omnibus down to a resaurant on Nassau Street, where we had a "square meal." The pigs, and the razor-backs of a larger growth, were running everywhere in the streets, eating the offal thrown from the houses. They were the city scavengers. Towards night they would be seen running from corner to corner in quest of their homes. They would look around this corner and around that, all the time squealing, until the right corner was found, and then they would dart for the sty. Dickens' description, written later, is true to the letter.

Looking northward from Twentieth Street, but few houses could be seen. Murray Hill was a pile of rocks. The Forty-second Street reservoir was finished, and there was nothing to obstruct the view of it. We walked up to and went upon it. I visited Barnum's Museum at the corner of Fulton Street and Broadway.

Of his military experience, Mr. Welles says:

On graduating from college I became liable to military duty. I was warned to appear at the next drill-day of our company, accoutred as the law directs. I borrowed a cartridge-box and bayonet and sheath, and a musket, from a neighbor, and answered to my name at the roll-call. I went through the exercises to the satisfaction of the Captain, Henry Talcott. The next year Major-General Pratt called out the division to appear at Hartford. This comprised one-half of all the troops in the State. Of course I was there, equipped as at the first drill. Our regiment formed on Bridge Street. The meadows of East Hartford were chosen for the grand parade and evolutions. There was an immense crowd. All went off well and without a single accident. General Pratt had great military pride and enjoyed the display hugely.

Mr. Welles was a member of the South Glastonbury Blues for some time, until a change in the State laws relieved him from further military duty.

During the ten years that elapsed after college, during which time he was engaged in the practice of law, Mr. Welles' health continued to grow steadily worse, until at last the family doctor advised him to seek another and more equable climate, preferably in the West. After the death of the parents he loved so well, he disposed of his property and prepared to leave, delaying his departure only to marry Jerusha Howard Lord, whose indomitable spirit did not quail before visions of the hardships of a pioneer's life. A few days before the departure, Mr. Welles served on the committee of arrangements for the celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Glastonbury, which was held on the eighteenth of May, and "was a notable success." After taking leave of his many friends, Mr. Welles left Glastonbury, accompanied by his wife, on May 23, 1853, en route for the West. He was thirty-two years of age at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Welles spent some time at Aurora, Victor, Elgin, Port Byron, Galena, and St. Paul before finally settling in the town of St. Anthony, a thriving lumber center, which in the year 1873 was incorporated with the city of Minneapolis. Mr. Welles' advent into St. Anthony was the beginning of a long business and public career that had inestimable influence upon the State. During the first two years of his residence in St. Anthony he managed and supervised the largest sawmills in the vicinity, and gave the first and most important impetus to the growth of the town by building a dam in the rapids of the Mississippi River which added six months to the yearly working time of the lumber industry and exactly doubled the output. From this time on St. Anthony grew rapidly. He was a moving factor in the religious life of the community by his zealous work in the building of new churches and by assisting in every way possible the local ministers in their difficult work of spreading the gospel throughout the adjacent and sparsely-settled sections. In the spring of 1855 Mr. Welles was elected the first mayor of the city of St. Anthony, a city charter having been obtained but recently from the State Legislature, and while an incumbent of this important office worked unceasingly and tirelessly for the commercial, religious, educational, and industrial advancement of his adopted city. With several other prominent men of St. Anthony, he was instrumental in the erection of a suspension bridge across the river, this bridge being the very first to span the Mississippi throughout its entire length. Mr. Welles bought much property within the town site of the present city of St. Cloud, and bent his energies to good advantage in the building up of that city. His real estate interests increased in ratio with the retrogression of his lumber interests, the instability of the latter making the choice of another business advisable. His large holdings of property in St. Anthony began to be more and more in demand by mercantile firms and home builders. An astute business man, he prospered steadily, although seriously inconvenienced by the two great financial panics that swept over the great Northwest, leaving failure in their wakes. As a protagonist in the building of the first railroads, Mr. Welles received the heartfelt gratitude of his fellow-townsmen, and gave the second great impetus to the commercial growth of the community. During the winter of 1854-55, he was associated with Franklin Steele and Dr. A. E. Ames in the reduction of the great tract of land known as the Fort Snelling Reservation. The work of these men, after countless vicissitudes, was of extreme importance in the building up of the town and city by throwing open much of this land to settlement. In the year 1856 he accompanied Richard Chute to Washington to help in interesting the legislators favorably toward the passage of the land grant act. His work in this capacity was rewarded with success. In 1858, at the first Minneapolis town election, Mr. Welles was elected president of the Town Council, and also president of the Board of Education, and discharged the duties of each office with his customary ability. In 1868 Mr. Welles was deeply interested in the attempt to unite the two municipal corporations of St. Anthony and Minneapolis into a strong entity, and for his efforts received the appointment of the commission to draw up the necessary charter. This first attempt, however, failed, since neither municipality was yet willing to relinquish its rights. In the year 1863, Mr. Welles was made the Democratic nominee for the office of Governor of the State of Minnesota, nearly winning the election, although seriously hampered by a third party candidate. Mr. Welles had previously changed his political affiliations to the Democratic party from the Whigs, upon the latter merging with the Republican party.

In the building of some of the finest hotels and public buildings of the vicinity, Mr. Wells was particularly active. Upon the completion of one hotel, as a mark of appreciation for his efficient services in promoting the stock and in organizing the company, he was tendered a public dinner. Probably no man in the history of St. Anthony and Minneapolis was as active in so many varied projects, and all designed for the public welfare, as was Mr. Welles. As a director and first president of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad, he organized the company, pushed the road to completion, and successfully directed its operation, in the face of appalling odds, and was rewarded by the gratitude of his city and the complete discomfiture of the opposing faction. With unusual foresight Mr. Welles early recognized the possibilities of certain sections of St. Anthony and Minneapolis for business centers, and manipulated his large holdings of real estate to this end. Thus, Mr. Welles, and certain contemporaries, influenced the divisional growth of the cities, made this growth possible by public improvements, and ushered in a period of strong industrial and commercial life which has been directly responsible for the amazing and rapid growth of the State of Minnesota.

As a financier, Mr. Welles served as president and director of the Northwestern National Bank over a long period, building it up until it became one of the soundest and most successful financial institutions west of Chicago. He was also a trustee of the Farmers' and Mechanics' Savings Bank, and was associated with its initial organization. His opinions in financial matters, or in public questions, always carried weight. In fact, as one review of his life points out: "Whenever any important public question was under discussion the opinion of Henry T. Welles was sought and his coöperation solicited. His views were often an influencing factor in shaping the course of events, and he was truly one of the empire builders of the Northwest."

Mr. Welles was a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church throughout his life, and had acted as warden in three different parishes: Holy Trinity, Gethsemane, and St. Mark's. The present St. Mark's Church, at Hennepin Avenue and Oak Grove Street, stands on the site of the old Welles homestead.

Henry Titus Welles died at his home in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 4, 1898, during his seventy-seventh year as a result of an attack of nervous prostration, from which he never fully recovered. He is described as having been a man of fine personal appearance, robust in his earlier years, quiet and dignified, and easily recognizable as a leader of men.

The passing of Henry Titus Welles lost to the State of Minnesota a man who had helped to shape her destiny with the sincerity, prescience, and efficiency of which only a great and noble citizen is capable. Press, pulpit, and fraternities united in eulogies of him who had done so much for the advancement and betterment of city, county, and State. The love and respect accorded Mr. Welles is fully evinced in the following excerpts of eulogistic surveys of his life, published shortly after his death.

The minutes of the Vestry of St. Mark's Church, says in part:

Henry T. Welles was a man whose heart and mind led him to religion; he was a constant attendant upon the services of the Episcopal Church as long as his health would allow; he was one of the originators of St. Mark's Parish in 1868, and served it as a warden for ten years; he has always been a most liberal contributor to the Parish; he donated ground and gave largely towards building a rectory for his beloved rector, the late Bishop Thomas; an appeal to him for help by any religious organization always met with a generous response; many are the poor who will miss his kindly help; not only his own parish but the Diocese and its church workers will mourn his taking away.

The board of trustees of the Bishop Seabury Mission adopted resolutions, of which the following is a part:

We, the Board of Trustees of the Bishop Seabury Mission, hereby place upon record, and in this form express to the members of his family our high appreciation of the Christian character and noble work of our late associate, Mr. Henry T. Welles. As a member of this board from the beginning he was, so long as health permitted, uniformly regular in his attendance upon its meetings, judicious in his counsels, active in its work, sleepless in its interests, and generous in his contributions. As a devout churchman, a scholarly gentleman, a practical, clear-sighted business man, and a valued personal friend, we sadly miss him from our deliberations. Our hearts go out in sympathy to his widow and children.

An issue of "The Churchman" says, in part:

Mr. Welles manifested in his earlier years of New England residence marked characteristics as citizen, scholar, and Christian. Coming to Minnesota in 1853, he was one of the founders of the State and Church. . . . Mr. Welles' interest was larger than parochial. No mission or feeble parish in the city or in outlying territory was started apart from his counsel and aid. Bishop Whipple relied on his judgment in the establishment of Minnesota's Diocesan Institutions; his money was generously given and his counsel was of even greater service than his money.

In closing a long memorial sketch of the life of Henry T. Welles, the "Minnesota Church Record," under date of April, 1898, says:

We need not speak of his parochial gifts which are gratefully remembered in Gethsemane and St. Mark's, of his interest in what was known as St. Mark's Free Chapel, of his benefactions to St. Barnabas Hospital and to the Bishop Seabury Mission, nor of the many other channels along which his beneficence flowed. The older churchmen of the Diocese remember his presence at our diocesan councils, his calm judgment, wisdom, and the confidence of the members in his opinions. He held the position of treasurer of the Diocese under great financial difficulties. He was the first layman appointed on the board of trustees of the Bishop Seabury Mission. He was chosen to represent the Diocese at the general convention; a member of the convention that elected Bishop Whipple, and at different times has served the Diocese as well as his Parish in every important position.

Not only was Mr. Welles a man of business, a careful financier, but also a student. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Hartford, Connecticut, and intended to take holy orders, but the state of his health compelled him to relinquish this. He was a clear thinker. His discourses were thoughtful, and his leisure was devoted to reading, study, and writing, beyond the lot of most busy men. We have spoken here only of his relation to the church. His relation to the business interests of the city of his adoption, and to its material development, is a part of the history of Minneapolis. Esteemed by all who knew him he may be said to be of the number of those of whom it is written: "The memory of the just is blessed."

Henry T. Welles married, at Glastonbury, Connecticut, May 3, 1853, Jerusha Howard Lord, who was born in Bolton, Connecticut, a daughter of Joseph and Chloe (Moulton) Lord, of a prominent old New England family. (See Lord VIII.) Mrs. Welles survived her husband until May 29, 1921, when she died during her eighty-eighth year.

Lord

Arms—Argent, on a fesse between three cinquefoils azure, two pheons of the field.

Crest—A dexter arm hand clenched proper, in a maunch azure cuffed or.

HIS name is derived from a term applied to those who were master of, or in control of, landed estate in England. At the present time it is used in conjunction with names of the nobility in England. As early as 1373 A. D. the surname Lord appears, families of the name settling in Nottingham, Cambridge, and in Huntingdonshire. Roger and Walter le Lord, of Cambridge and Huntingdon, respectively, are the first of the name which appears on the records. The name in the course of the next hundred years appears in Cumberland and Derbyshire.

Thomas Lord, of Brampton, Cumberland, was son of a George Lord by his wife Joan. He married, about 1620, Margaret Hatfield, daughter of Ralph Hatfield. He was a contemporary of Thomas Lord, an emigrant from England, and probably from Derbyshire, who settled in Hartford, Connecticut.

I

THOMAS LORD, immigrant ancestor, was in England as early as 1590. He came from Essex County, England, on the ship "Elizabeth and Ann" in 1635, landed in Boston, Massachusetts, lived one year in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and then removed to Hartford, Connecticut, where he was one of the first settlers and a man of position and influence. He married, in England, Dorothy, surname unknown.

Children:

1. Richard, born in 1611.

V

DANIEL LORD, son of Nathaniel and Hannah (Emmons) Lord, was born about 1717, as the records show that Daniel Lord died at Vernon, Connecticut, January 15, 1785, "aged 67." He resided at Millington, East Haddam, Connecticut, and his later history was unknown to the compiler of the Chapman Genealogy; but there seems little doubt that he and his wife Lydia were the Daniel and widow who died at Vernon, only about twenty-five miles from Millington. Especially so, when it is noted that the record of the baptism of the two children of their son, Daniel, Jr., is found on the same Vernon Church records. He married, October 11, 1751, Lydia Chapman, born November 9, 1721, daughter of Benjamin and Lydia Chapman, of Saybrook, Connecticut. (See Chapman IV.) "The widow Lord" died April 9, 1786, at Vernon, Connecticut, "aged 64." She was a direct descendant of Robert Chapman, who came from Hull, England, to Boston, Massachusetts, in August, 1635, and the following November removed to Saybrook, Connecticut, and married Ann Blith, or Bliss. Robert Chapman, Jr., son of the first settler, married as his second wife, Mrs. Mary Sheather, widow of Samuel Sheather, and had a son Benjamin, who was the father of Lydia Chapman who married Daniel Lord, as mentioned above.

He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, serving as ensign at the Lexington Alarm under Captain Joseph Jewett. "Deacon Daniel Lord" united with the Columbia, Connecticut, Congregational Church by letter, in 1800, and was chosen deacon in 1801. Daniel Lord and wife Jane, "from Columbia," were admitted to the Bolton Church, April 2, 1809. He married, at Bolton, Connecticut, January 22, 1789, Mrs. Jane (Hyde) Knight, daughter of Thomas and Elizabeth (Huntington) Hyde, of Norwich, West Farms (now Franklin), Connecticut. (See Hyde V.) She was born at Norwich, July 9, 1757, and married (first), September 14, 1783, Joseph Knight. Daniel Lord was her second husband.

Children, born at Bolton, Connecticut, and baptized, as infants, at the Vernon Church:

1. Joseph, of whom further.
2. Daniel, born September 24, 1791; married Clarissa, surname unknown.

Her mother, Chloe (Howard) Moulton, was born at Bolton, June 13, 1768, a daughter of John and Chloe (Talcott) Howard. Hyde

Arms—Azure, a chevron between three lozenges or.

Crest—An eagle, wings endorsed sable, beaked and membered or.

THE family name Hyde is derived from one of the six Hyde parishes of England, and these originally derived their names from location "at the hide," a plot of about one hundred and twenty acres of land.

John de la Hyde is recorded in the Hundred Rolls of Oxfordshire, 1273 A. D., and Adam Atte Hyde in the Writs of Parliament, 1300 A. D.

There are several titled families of the name in England, but the highest are now extinct. The Hyde families of Norbury and Hyde, County Chester, whose arms are herein described, descended from Sir Robert Hyde, living in the reign of Henry III, and his wife, the heiress of Norbury. This ancient family was the parent stock of the Hydcs of Denton and Urmeston, County Lancaster; of Westhatch, County Wilts; and of Castle Hyde, County Cork. The eventual heiress, Anne, daughter of Edward Hyde, Esq., of Norbury and Hyde, married George Clarke, Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of New York.

I

WILLIAM HYDE first appears on record at Hartford, Connecticut, as one of the original settlers of that place in 1636. He probably came over with the Rev. Thomas Hooker, of Leicestershire, to Newtown (now Cambridge), Massachusetts, in 1633. He owned lands in Hartford until 1639. About 1648 he removed to Saybrook, Connecticut, and his daughter married there in 1652. He was one of the thirty-five original proprietors of Norwich, Connecticut, which was settled in 1660, and was a man of importance there, often elected selectman. He died at Norwich, January 6, 1681. His wife's name is not known, and she probably died either at Hartford or Saybrook.

Children:

1. Hester, born probably in England; married in 1652, John Post.
2. Samuel, of whom further.

SAMUEL HYDE, son of William Hyde, was born in Hartford, Connecticut, about 1637, and died in Norwich, Connecticut, in 1677. He mar-

THE family name Huntington means "of Huntington" parish, and there is one parish of that name in each of the following counties: Wheshire, Yorkshire, Staffordshire and Herefordshire. The patronymic Huntington is also in some cases a corruption of Huntingdon.

He married (probably second), June 21, 1627, Margaret Baret, daughter of Christopher Baret, mayor of Norwich, 1634, 1648. He was chosen, soon after the settlement, at Norwich as deacon of Mr. Fitch's church, in which capacity he served until succeeded by his son in 1696. In 1674 and 1685 he represented Norwich in the General Court; and in 1690 and 1696 he was Selectman. He served as ensign of the Train Band in 1721, and deputy to the General Court in 1727; and was the only one in his generation of that Huntington trio of whom the historian of Norwich says "in the early part of the next (18th) century, there were, perhaps, no more distinguished men in the town." He married, February 3, 1702-03, Priscilla Miller. (See Miller I.)

Chapman

Arms—Per chevron argent and gules a crescent counterchanged.

Crest—A dexter arm embowed, habited in mail proper, cuffed argent, holding in the hand proper a broken tilting spear or enfiled with a chaplet vert.

Motto—Crescit sub pondere virtus. (Virtue thrives under oppression.)

THE surname Chapman had its origin in the Old English verb "ceap" (M. E. cheap), which means literally "to barter," and has its counterpart in all languages derived from the Teutonic stem. The noun derived from the verb was chapman, which in medieval England meant generally any trader or dealer, a merchant. From the occupative name the surname was derived early in the thirteenth century, and we find the entry Thomas le Chapman in the Hundred Rolls, 1273. Other names from the same stem are the famous "Cheapside," and the word "chap," now a slang term, which originally meant a customer.

The American Chapmans descend from several unrelated progenitors, who settled in different parts of the New England Colonies in the middle and latter half of the seventeenth century. Many of those who bear the name have made valuable contributions to the life of the great nation of the Western world. "Honorable rather than famous" is the phrase used by Chapman, author of the work entitled "The Chapman Family."

I

ROBERT CHAPMAN, born in 1616, died October 13, 1687, came from Hull, Yorkshire, England, to Boston, Massachusetts, in 1635, whence he sailed with Lion Gardiner on November 3, as one of a company of twenty men sent by Sir Richard Saltonstall to make settlements under the patent of Lord Say and Seal, at what is now Saybrook, Connecticut. He is supposed to have been about eighteen years of age at the time. He was a man of influence at Saybrook, serving as town clerk for many years; and for a long term of years as commissioner for Saybrook. He was elected as Saybrook's deputy at the General Court forty-three times, and was therefore a member of the Legislature at more sessions than any other man, from the time of the settlement of Saybrook to the present. He was also assistant to the Governor nine times. He was a very large landholder in Saybrook and East Haddam, and left 4,500 acres in Hebron, which he received as one of the legatees of Uncas and his sons, bequesting 1,500 acres to each of his three sons. He himself settled on a tract at Oyster River, about two miles west of Saybrook Fort. The records state that he married, April 29, 1642, Ann Blith, but it is probable that the name was Bliss, a surname which frequently appears on Saybrook records, while the record of this marriage is the only record of Blith. She died November 20, 1685.

Children, born at Saybrook, Connecticut:

1. John, born July (about the first), 1644.

He owned 2,000 acres of land in Saybrook, East Haddam, and Hebron, Connecticut, and was a man of extensive influence in civil affairs. He was for many years clerk of Oyster River quarter, and commissioner and surveyor for the town of Saybrook. Shortly after his father's death, he was elected Representative to the State Legislature, and filled the office at eighteen sessions. He was highly esteemed in the church, which appointed him delegate to the assembly that formed the Saybrook Platform in 1708. This instrument was the standard for the Congregational churches of Connecticut for a century and a half. He married (first), July 27, 1671, Sarah Griswold, of Norwich, Connecticut. JOHN TALCOTT, son of John and Anne (Skinner) Talcott, was born in England. He first came to Boston, Massachusetts, with others of the Rev. Thomas Hooker's company in the ship "Lion," which sailed from England, June 22, 1632, and arrived in Boston, Massachusetts, September 16, 1632. This company first settled at Newtown, now Cambridge, where John Talcott was admitted a freeman, November 6, 1632; was one of the Representatives in the General Court for Newtown, May 14, 1634, and was chosen, February 4, 1634, one of the Selectmen of Newtown. He was the fifth greatest proprietor of houses and lands in the town, owning four houses. He sold all his possessions in Newtown, May 1, 1636, and with one hundred others, led by the Rev. Mr. Hooker, became one of the founders of the present city of Hartford, Connecticut, in 1636. Richards

Arms—Sable, a chevron between three fleurs-de-lis argent.

Crest—A griffin's head erased or.

THE family name Richards is from the possessive of Richard, the Christian name, meaning "kingly power." Yonge ascribes its popularity in England to St. Richard, a king of Kent, who became a monk. Hamo, "fil. Ricardi," is on record in the Hundred Rolls of Norfolk, A. D. 1273; and Adam Ricard in Kirby's Quest, A. D. 1327.

He lived in Dorchester until 1636, when he removed to Weymouth, where he became partner in a grist mill. His will was proved January 28, 1650-51, and is said to bear the date December 17, 1650. In 1662 he settled in Hartford; in 1663 was chosen selectman; and in October, 1664, was chosen an assistant for the Connecticut Colony. In 1672 he, with Governor John Winthrop, was chosen a commissioner of the United Colonies, and again in 1675, for the purpose of rendering the union of the New England Colonies permanent. Nicholas Edmunds, of Alkham in County Kent, England, had a daughter Alice, born about 1612, as appears by the record, discovered by the famous English genealogist, Colonel Joseph L. Chester, of the marriage license, allegation dated May 24, 1636, with the request "to be married in the parish church of St. Leonard in Foster lane, London," in which she is described as daughter of Nicholas Edmunds, of Alkham in Kent, "spinster, aged about 24 years." She married the Rev. John Ward, later pastor at Haverhill, Massachusetts. (See Ward V.)

Statue in State Library at Hartford, Conn.

Haynes

Haynes-Hain(e)s-Haine Arms—Argent, a fesse azure bezantee between three annulets of the second.

THE surname Haynes (Haines) is derived from the genitive (possessive) form of the given name Hain. Thus John, son of Hain, was John Hainis. Through frequent use of this given name the family came to be designated as Hain(e)s or Haynes. Thomas fil. Hayene was of County Norfolk, England, in 1273, and fifty years later, in Somerset, Ralph Haynes appears. In Essex County, England, a branch of the family appears, coming from Somerset in the latter half of the fifteenth century. John Haynes, the first connected ancestor of this family, was of Oldfold, County Essex, England. He married Mary Mitchell, by whom he had a son John, later destined to become Governor of Connecticut. They were of Old Head, Essex.

William Haines, called "the elder," was of London. His will, dated September 5, 1590, was proved and administration was granted September 23, 1590. He is the ancestor of the present family of the name in England.

I

GOVERNOR JOHN HAYNES, son of John Haynes, Esquire, of County Essex, England, and his wife, Mary (Mitchell) Haynes, arrived in New England in company with John Cotton and Thomas Hooker, in the "Griffin," September 4, 1633. At the election in Newtown, Massachusetts, in 1635, he was chosen Governor. In 1637 he removed to Connecticut, and on April 11, 1639, was chosen the first Governor of Connecticut. He continued to hold the office of Governor every second year, there being a legal provision that no person should hold the office oftener than once in two years. He was held in high esteem. He died early in January, 1654, much lamented. He married (first), in England, Mary Thornton, daughter of Robert Thornton, of Nottingham. He married (second), in New England, Mabel Harlakenden, daughter of Richard Harlakenden. (See Harlakenden XIII.)

He graduated from Harvard College in 1658, and entered the ministry. After preaching at Wethersfield, Connecticut, he removed to Hartford, where he succeeded the Rev. Samuel Stone in the Rev. Thomas Hooker's pulpit in 1664, and took an active part in the controversy regarding infant baptism, which for a time greatly agitated the public mind, the General Assembly even intermeddling in the matter. He married Sarah Lord, of Hartford, and granddaughter of Thomas and Dorothy Lord. She died in Hartford, November 15, 1705, aged sixty-seven years. Her will, made February 17, 1698, and proved December 19, 1705, mentions her daughter Mary; supposed to mean daughter-in-law, wife of her son John.

He graduated from Harvard College in 1689, and was a preacher in Springfield, Massachusetts, a short time. He returned to Hartford, and was Judge of the Superior Court of Connecticut. With the death of his sons, the male line of this Haynes family in America became extinct, though there are numerous Haynes descendants bearing other names. Glover Arms—Sable, a chevron erminois between three crescents argent.

Crest—A crossbow azure between two wings or.

LOVER is an ancient English surname, and from what has been gathered of its origin is indisputably Saxon. In some of the oldest counties, as Warwickshire and Kent, it was at a very ancient date written Golofre—then Glove, and in the middle of the fourteenth century it was written, as it now is, Glover. It has undergone no changes since, except that some of the earliest settlers of New England occasionally wrote it with a “u” instead of a “v” as may be seen sometimes in the oldest documents, viz., Glouer, although there is no record of the name being spelled in that way in England at any time. It was a corruption which soon went into disuse, and the name was written Glover again, according to the English orthography, and has continued to be so written to the present time.

Richard le Glovere is recorded in the Hundred Rolls of Bedfordshire, A. D. 1273. Families of Glover under the Christian names of William and John, were recorded in Buckinghamshire, Berkshire, and Warwickshire, about the middle of the fourteenth century. Robert (or Thomas) Glover, of Ashford in County Kent, was a herald and heraldic writer, assistant to Camden, Clarenceux, or, Second King-at-Arms, who on March 4, 1577, granted to him the arms of the Ashford, Kent, and Coventry, Warwick, Glover family. This Robert Glover began the Catalogue of Honor, to make clear the descent of the royal pedigrees.

Lancashire is one of the northern counties of England, and the town of Prescott, in that county, is one of its most extensive towns. It is bounded on the south by the River Mersey; on the west by Walton Parish; on the north-northwest by Ormskirk Parish; and on the east by the Parish of Warrington. Its extreme length is twelve miles, from Dalton on the South to Mumford on the North, its breadth is eight miles. It is situated in the western part of the county, about ten miles from Liverpool in the same county, and two hundred and twenty-five miles from London by railway. It was divided into parishes, one of which, Rainhill, was the birthplace of John Glover, who in 1630 emigrated with others under Governor Winthrop, to New England, and became the American ancestor of numerous descendants.

In the eighteenth year of the reign of Edward III, William Daniel held the towns of Dutton, Rainhill, and Eccleston. His possession of them was temporary, and in the twelfth year of the reign of Henry IV they were held by Alan de Norrys, under the Baron of Bolton. The Ecclestons for a long time were Lords of the Manor of Barton Head, in Dutton. The family of Norrys acquired Rainhill in the time of Edward II, and held the manors of Dutton, Rainhill, and Eccleston under Thomas, Earl of Lancaster, who held the Duchy in the time of Henry VIII, and sold portions of it in the time of Elizabeth to Thomas Glover, Esq., father of the American emigrant. Thomas Glover conveyed these lands to his eldest son, Mr. John Glover, of Rainhill, afterwards of Dorchester and Boston, who in 1652, by deed of gift, conveyed them to his eldest son and heir apparent, Mr. Thomas Glover, of London, merchant. The Glovers were not early in Lancashire. The county history does not give any account of them until nearly the close of the sixteenth century. There is a tradition which has come down among some branches of his descendants, from father to son, through long generations, which fixes their original county as Warwick, and the city of Coventry in that county one of their original places of abode. This tradition has been attested and confirmed by Heralds. Robert Glover, who suffered martyrdom in September, 1555, noticed by Fuller in his "Worthies," had brothers, John, William, and Thomas, and possessed estates in Monceter, Baxterly, and other places in the county of Warwickshire.

The arms described are those of Glover of Ashford, County Kent, and of Coventry, County Warwick, granted March 4, 1577, which are said to have been brought to this country by John Glover.

Thomas Glover, father of the first American founder, lived in Rainhill, Lancashire, England, from the time of his marriage to Margery Deane, daughter of Thomas Deane, February 10, 1594, to his death, December 13, 1619.

Children, born and baptized in Rainhill Parish, Lancashire:

1. Ellen, baptized February 2, 1595.
2. John (twin), baptized and died July 27, 1599.
3. Elizabeth (twin), baptized and died July 27, 1599.
4. John, of whom further.

I

JOHN GLOVER, son of Thomas and Margery (Deane) Glover, was baptized in Rainhill Parish, Prescot, Lancashire, England, August 12, 1600, and died in Boston, in New England, February 11, 1653-54, in his fifty-fourth year. By his father's will he came into possession of large estates in England, situated in Rainhill, Eccleston, Knowlesby, and other places. Being the eldest surviving son, he inherited by right of primogeniture a double portion of his father's possessions, and was named an executor, with his mother, to carry out the provisions of the will, although at the time (1619) he was not of full age. He appears to have attained the age of manhood at Rainhill, living on his estates there until 1629. He was sometimes called the "worshipful Mr. Glover." He was a captain in the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of London, and was also a member of a Lodge of Free Masons. In 1628 his name appears on the records of the "London Company" organized that year to settle planters in New England, Sir Richard Saltonstall being the leader, and the members being Non-Conformists or Puritans. He, with Sir Richard Saltonstall, Knight, and thirty-seven others subscribed two thousand one hundred and fifty pounds "unto the general stock of the Adventurers for a plantation intended at Massachusetts Bay in New England in America."

The Dorchester Company, with whom John Glover was always associated and with whom he probably came, set sail in the ship "Mary and John" from England, March 20, 1629-30, commanded by Captain Squeb, and is said to have arrived at Nantasket (Hull), Massachusetts, May 31, 1630. The manner in which Captain Squeb treated his passengers and deceived them by putting them ashore at Nantasket, when he had promised to land them at Charlestown, is too well known to require any detail here. Some of them took boats and found their way to Charlestown, and others, who remained at Nantasket, found a way to Dorchester Neck, adjoining a place called by the Indians Mattapan, to which they gave the name of New Dorchester and commenced a settlement there about the first of June. The place was afterwards called Dorchester Plantation. The same writer, who records the above, states that the Glovers were settled here a month before Governor Winthrop and the ship that came with him arrived. Mr. Glover came to New England on the "Mary and John." It has been questioned by some as to the ship in which he came over, probably on account of a note of Mr. Frothingham, in his "History of Charlestown," by which it might appear that he arrived earlier. Frothingham, in a list of those who stayed and became inhabitants of Charlestown in the year 1629, gives the names of Increase Nowell, Esq., Mr. William Aspinwall, Mr. Richard Palsgrave, Edward Converse, William Penn, William Hudson, William Blackenbury, and Mr. John Glover. He also says that Mr. Glover removed to Dorchester, where he became a prominent man, being a Selectman and a Representative from 1637 to 1652. He also writes that Mr. Glover died in 1654, which does not agree with the Dorchester town records.

The above from Frothingham has led many to doubt of his coming over in the "Mary and John," with the Dorchester Company, but he was always associated with them; his interests were identified with theirs, and he served them in a public capacity until his death, although he had removed to Boston. His name stands among a list of inhabitants at the incorporation of the town of Dorchester in 1631, according to Blake's "Annals." When the church was reorganized there in 1636 (Richard Mather, pastor), he and his wife Anna were among the first signers of the covenant. He may have remained in Charlestown until that time, but there is no evidence of it.

Mr. Glover was made a freeman in England before his emigration, and took the oath of allegiance, which exempted him from that ceremony after his arrival here. The prefix, "Mr.," he brought with him, which was then one of honor and dignity, and he has been more generally designated by that than any other title. His armorial bearings were those granted to Thomas Glover, Esquire, of the Body of King James I, who was son of Thomas Glover, of Coventry, Warwickshire, knighted 17th of August, 1606. Mr. Glover was a godly and upright man. His religion was that of a strict Non-conformist, or Puritan, and it appears to have been the ruling motive of his life, leading him to leave his English home and forego all the comforts and conveniences of an English life to settle on the cold, uncomfortable, cheerless shore of New England. His life after his arrival and settlement at Dorchester was evidently one of unceasing action and service to the Colony. During a period of nearly eighteen years in length his name appears not only as a public officer in Dorchester, but in other towns among those who sat in judgment. In Salem, Charlestown, Cambridge, and at Barnstable and other places in Plymouth Colony, he was frequently called in council in cases which required judicial decisions. He was chosen a Selectman of Dorchester in 1636, and continued in that office until his removal to Boston about 1650. He was Representative to the General Court from 1636 to 1652, when he was chosen an Assistant, and continued in that office until his death, February 1, 1652. He conveyed to his oldest son, Thomas Glover, the title and possession of all his estates by indenture still extant. His homestead in Dorchester he passed to his fourth son, Nathaniel. He married, in Lancashire, England, about 1625, Anna, surname unknown. They were the parents of five children, the first three of whom were born in Rainhill Parish, England.

Children:

1. Thomas, born January 8, 1627.
2. Habackuk, born May 13, 1628; married, in Roxbury, Massachusetts.

3. John, born October 11, 1629; married, in Ipswich, Massachusetts.
4. Nathaniel, born in Dorchester, Massachusetts, in 1631.
5. Pelatiah, of whom further.

II

PELATIAH GLOVER, son of John and Anna Glover, was born in Dorchester, Massachusetts, in November, 1637, and died at Springfield, Massachusetts, March 29, 1692. He resided during his youth in Dorchester, and was prepared for college by the Rev. Richard Mather. By a codicil (dated April 11, 1653) to his father's will he was to receive two hundred pounds in addition to what had been provided for his education and one-fourth part of his two farms in Dorchester, at the decease of his mother. Dorchester church records show that on September 26, 1658, when he united with the church, he was a student at Harvard, but when a fourth year was added to the three originally required years of the course, he left to study divinity with Mr. Mather and preached at Dorchester on fast day, June 15, 1659. On June 18, 1661, he was ordained and placed in charge of the First Church at Springfield, Massachusetts, where he continued pastor until his death, March 29, 1692. His house and valuable library was burned by the Indians during King Philip's War, 1675. He married, May 20, 1660, Hannah Cullick, who was born about 1640, and died in Springfield, Massachusetts, December 20, 1689, daughter of John Cullick, of Boston, by his first wife. (See Cullick II.)

Children, born in Springfield, Massachusetts:

1. Samuel, born November 28, 1661, died July 24, 1689.
2. John, born July 1, 1663, died January 14, 1664-65.
3. Pelatiah, born January 27, 1665-66.
4. Anna, born August 21, 1668, died June 6, 1690.
5. Mary, of whom further.

III

MARY GLOVER, daughter of Pelatiah and Hannah (Cullick) Glover, was born April 17, 1672. She married, November 7, 1693, John Haynes, son of Rev. Joseph and Sarah (Lord) Haynes. (See Haynes III.)

Pitkin

Pitkin

Arms—Argent, an eagle displayed with two heads per fesse azure and sable.

Crest—A dove proper.

Motto—Confido in Domino.

THE name Pitkin is a contraction of Peterkin, a diminutive form of Peter. The records of Hertfordshire, England, show that this name has been both honorable and prominent in England from the thirteenth century, a number of the family having held appointments under the several English sovereigns. The royal borough of Berkhamsted, Hertfordshire, was the home of the Pitkins at an early date. In the sixteenth century Roger Pitkin was in Hertfordshire. About 1525 William Pitkin was a schoolmaster in the grammar school at Berkhamsted, St. Peter's, in that county or shire; and in 1628 William Pitkin, gentleman, was burgess in Parliament, representing Berkhamsted. Little is known of the family of William Pitkin, the progenitor of this name in America, previous to their arrival in New England. He left a brother Roger in London, a military officer in the King's service, and his sister Martha followed him to America, becoming the wife of Simon Wolcott, of Windsor, Connecticut.

I

WILLIAM PITKIN, the founder of the American family of the name, was born in 1635, and came to this country from London, England, in 1659. His sister, Martha, came some months later, to return with him to England, "not supposing," she said, "that he intended to remain in the wilderness." But both married here and remained. He had "an excellent law education," and a book of one hundred and seventy sermons in his handwriting has been handed down to his descendants. Neither lawyer nor minister being in demand, he applied for and received permission to teach school at eighty pounds per year and a load of wood from each scholar. He bequeathed in his will nearly eight hundred acres of land, after having given a portion to his two older sons. He became a Freeman in 1662, and from 1675 to 1690 represented Hartford in the Colonial Assembly. He held various other important offices up to the time of his death, which occurred December 16, 1694. He married Hannah Goodwin, born about 1639, died February 12, 1723-24, only daughter of Hon. Ozias and Mary (Woodward) Goodwin. (See Goodwin II.)

Children:

1. Roger, born in 1662; married (first) Hannah Stanley; (second), in 1686, Hannah Spencer.
2. William, of whom further.
3. Hannah, born about 1666; married Timothy Cowles.
4. John, born about 1668, died 1706, unmarried.
5. Nathaniel, born about 1670; married (first) Hester Hosmer; (second), in 1710, Elizabeth Whiting.
6. George, born in September, 1675, died in 1702, unmarried.
7. Elizabeth, born in October, 1677; married Captain John Marsh.
8. Ozias, born in September, 1679; married (first) Elizabeth Green; she died in 1724, and he married (second) Esther (Burnham) Cadwell, daughter of Richard Burnham, and widow of Matthew Cadwell.

II

WILLIAM PITKIN, son of William and Hannah (Goodwin) Pitkin, was born in 1664, and died April 5, 1723. He was educated by his father in his profession of the law. He represented Hartford in the General Assembly in 1696, and the next year was elected one of the Council of the Colony, being annually reëlected for twenty-six years or until the time of his death. After having been Judge of various courts, he was made Chief Justice of the Supreme Court in 1713. Besides holding all the aforesaid offices, he was a military officer, and before 1706 had built two fulling mills at Pitkin Falls, in connection with which he carried on a large business in clothings and woolens. He married, in 1686, Elizabeth Stanley, born October 24, 1669, died February 12, 1751, daughter of Captain Caleb and Hannah (Cowles) Stanley. (See Stanley III.)

Children:

1. Elizabeth, born August 30, 1687, died December 17, 1688.
2. Elizabeth, born August 18, 1689; married Rev. Benjamin Colton.
3. Martha, of whom further.
4. William, born April 30, 1694; married Mary Woodbridge, after serving as Lieutenant-Governor of Connecticut by a majority "so great that the votes were not counted."
5. Joseph, born May 26, 1696; married (first) Mary Lord, who died in 1740; (second) Eunice Chester, who died in 1756; (third) Madame Law, daughter of Hon. John Hall.

10. John, born December 18, 1707; married Elizabeth Olcott.
11. Jerusha, born June 22, 1710; married (first) Samuel Edwards; (second), in 1737, Rev. Ashbel Woodbridge. (See Edwards III.)

III

MARTHA PITKIN, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Stanley) Pitkin, born February 28, 1692. She married Thomas Welles. (See Welles IV.)

Stanley

Arms—Argent on a bend azure three bucks' heads cabossed or, a chief gules.

Crest—A demi-heraldic wolf erased argent, tufted or.

THE family name Stanley means "of Stanley," but there are at least ten parishes named Stanley in England. William de Stanlegh is on the Hundred Rolls of Wiltshire, and John de Stanlegh on the Hundred Rolls of County Oxford, 1273 A. D.

Burke in his "General Armourie of England, Scotland, and Ireland" states that the "Stanley family of Knowsley, County Lancaster, descended from the marriage of Sir John Stanley, Knight of the Garter, and Lord Deputy of Ireland in 1385, second son of Sir William Stanley, Lord of Stanley, with Isabella, daughter and heiress of Sir Thomas Latham, of Latham and Knowsley, knight." The grandson of this alliance, Sir Thomas Stanley, K. G., was summoned to Parliament as a Baron in 1455; and his son, Thomas, second Lord Stanley, so distinguished at the battle of Bosworth, was created in 1485 Earl of Derby. Of the junior branches of the noble house of Stanley we may mention the Stanleys of Holt, of Alderly, of Crosshall, of Ormskirk, and of Tong Castle.

In Willington, County Kent, lived a Stanley family, a younger branch of the Lancashire Stanleys, represented about 1600 by John, Thomas, and William Stanley, the latter of whom had a son Thomas, born in 1615, and a son William, born in 1617. Warren, author of "The Stanley Families," concludes that Timothy Stanley, mentioned below, was of this family. This theory is supported by the fact that Samuel Greenhill and Simon Willard, who were fellow passengers of the Stanley brothers, and are mentioned in a deposition made by Timothy Stanley's widow, are known to have been of Kent. The arms described are those given by Burke in his "General Armory" for the Stanleys.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA

I

TIMOTHY STANLEY was born in England, in January, 1602-03, and died in Hartford, Connecticut, in the spring of 1648. With his brothers, John and Thomas, he embarked at London, England, in 1634, and arrived at Boston, Massachusetts, in May, 1634, John having died on the way. He.

with his family and the families of his brothers, were at Newtown (later Cambridge), Massachusetts, in March, 1634-35, and in Hartford, Connecticut, in 1636. Timothy Stanley had sixty-eight acres of land in the division of lands, much more than most of the settlers, indicating that he was one of the wealthier men of the settlement. His home was on the west side of the present Front Street, near the banks of the "Great River," Connecticut, his estate here being appraised at 127 pounds, and with later purchases at "Farmington," made a total of 167 pounds. He was chosen Selectman in 1642; and the records indicate that he was a man of dignity, good substance and piety. Of his wife we know only that her name was Elizabeth, though it has been claimed that her maiden name was Morrice. She married (second), in 1661, Andrew Bacon, and died in Hartford, February 23, 1678-79, aged about seventy-six. She had no children by the second marriage.

Children of Timothy and Elizabeth Stanley:

1. Timothy, born in England, in January, 1634, died young.
2. Elizabeth, married Mark Lension (St. John).
3. Abigail, married, June 14, 1661, Samuel Cole. (See Cole I.)
4. Caleb, of whom further.
5. Lois, born in March, 1644.
6. Isaac, born March 10, 1648.

II

CALEB STANLEY, son of Timothy and Elizabeth Stanley, was born in March, 1642; and died in Hartford, Connecticut, May 5, 1718. On November 14, 1688, Caleb Stanley was appointed to the very responsible office of keeping the town's ammunition, and received the title of "Captain." He married (first) Hannah Cowles, born in 1643, died February 7, 1690, daughter of John Cowles. (See Cowles II.) He married (second), September 24, 1690, Mrs. Sarah (Foster) Long, widow of Zechariah Long. She died August 30, 1698, aged forty-four years. He married (third), September 14, 1699, Mrs. Lydia (Cole) Willson, widow of Deacon John Willson, and daughter of John Cole. She died in 1732.

ELIZABETH STANLEY, daughter of Caleb and Hannah (Cowles) Stanley, was born October 24, 1669, and died February 12, 1751. She married William Pitkin. (See Pitkin II.)

Goodwin

Arms—Or, two lions passant guardant sable, on a canton of the last three bezants or.

Crest—A demi-lion rampant, guardant sable holding in the paws a bezant.

THE name Goodwin is one of those the origin of which is so remote that it can be ascribed to no particular region. It undoubtedly grew out of the given name Godwin, which was common in this and allied forms throughout the whole of Northern Europe, and which in all probability originally signified "The Friend of God," or possibly the "Good Friend." It was one of a group of names having the same general significance, such as Godfrey and the corrupt Geoffrey among given names, and such names as Goodman, Goddard, and the German Gutman. It is possible and even probable that many families bearing the name have had independent origins, but there is no doubt that one among them is of very ancient and distinguished lineage and has played a part in English history from the earliest times. We have a record of one Robert Goodwin, living in Norwich, England, as early as 1238 A. D., and there can be no doubt from its form that the name was among those representing the first surnames in use. Family names were adopted in England during the first two centuries following the Norman Conquest, and doubtless it was during this period that the family was founded. The Norman form of the given name was Godfrey, the Saxon Godwin, so that it seems that our family is derived from the old Saxon stock, rather than from that which was grafted upon it at the time of the Conquest in 1066 A. D. Burke in his "General Armourie of England, Scotland, and Ireland" gives eighteen coats-of-arms for the Goodwin and Goodwyn families, and the seats of these armigerous groups include counties Bucks, Cambridge, York, Devon, Suffolk, Hertford, Middlesex, Surrey, Sussex, Warwick, Somerset, and Kent; and the city of London, which is located in the four counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Essex, and Kent. The arms described are those given by Burke for Goodwin, which have already been used by representatives of the Goodwin family in this country. The London arms are similar, but show only one lion on the shield.

As regards the American family, with which this sketch is chiefly concerned, the strong balance of probability connects it with the old English family, although a long and patient investigation of records in that country has failed to do more than locate its ancestors at Braintree and Bocking in Essexshire, England, and to discover some interesting facts about the White and Woodward family, into which the two brothers, William and Ozias Goodwin, married.

The Goodwin family of Hartford, Connecticut, is descended from Ozias Goodwin, who came with his brother William from London on the good ship "Lion," which sailed from that port, June 22, 1632, and arrived in Boston on September 16 following. They came from Braintree in Essexshire, and settled first in Newtown (now Cambridge), Massachusetts, from which place Ozias Goodwin went to Hartford, Connecticut, at an early date. William Goodwin, on the contrary, remained at Newtown, and became the ruling elder of the church there. Afterwards, however, he followed his brother to Hartford, and became a leader among the founders of the new Colony and Commonwealth on the Connecticut River. He did not found any family, however, as he left no sons to inherit his surname. His one daughter, Elizabeth, married John Crow, who was a partner in business with her father, and many of the leading families of Connecticut are descended from this union. He was the ruling elder of the Hartford Church, and was honored with many positions of trust and responsibility. In the church controversy that resulted in the founding of Hadley, Massachusetts, by a colony from the Hartford Church, he was a leader in the movement to leave the old Colony, and he became a founder of Hadley, and the elder of the church there. He did not remain permanently in Hadley even, but spent the last years of his life at Farmington, Connecticut, where his death occurred March 11, 1673.

William Goodwin married (first), at Shalford, November 7, 1616, Elizabeth White, who was baptized on March 5, 1591, at Shalford, Essexshire, England, and was a daughter of Robert White, of that place and Messing. She was a sister of Elder John White, and of Mary White, who married Joseph Loomis. Another sister, Anna, married John Porter, of Felsted, England, who was later a resident of Windsor, Connecticut.

I

OZIAS GOODWIN, brother of Elder William Goodwin, was born in 1596 in Essexshire, England, if his deposition in court in September, 1674, was correct, stating his age as seventy-eight years. He was married before coming to this country to Mary Woodward, also of Braintree, Essexshire, and a daughter of Robert Woodward, of that place. She is mentioned as a legatee in her father's will of May 27, 1640. The first record of Ozias Goodwin in Hartford is as a landholder among "such inhabitants as were granted lots to have only at the town's courtesie, with a libertie to fetch wood or keep swine or cows by proportion on the common." His home in February, 1639 to 1640, was situated on the highway leading from Seth Grant's house to Sentinel Hill, adjoining the lands of Thomas Burchwood, Thomas Hale, and Richard Lord. This lot is situated on what is now Trumbull Street, near Church Street, Hartford. Somewhat later in his life he removed to a location on the highway from the mill to the old ox pasture. He was one of those who, with his brother, Elder Goodwin, signed an agreement on April 18, 1659, to remove to Hadley, Massachusetts, a movement with which they were joined by inhabitants of Windsor and Wethersfield. However, at the last moment, Ozias Goodwin decided to remain where he was, and ten years later, on October 13, 1669, he was made a Freeman of Hartford. His death occurred there in the spring of 1683; his inventory was dated April 3 that year, and his heirs signed an agreement of partition three days later. To Ozias Goodwin and his wife three children were born, as follows:

1. William, born in England about 1629; married Susanna, surname unknown; died in Hartford, October 15, 1689.
2. Nathaniel, born in Hartford, Connecticut, about 1637; married (first) Sarah Coles; (second) Elizabeth Pratt.
3. Hannah, of whom further.

II

HANNAH GOODWIN, daughter of Ozias and Mary (Woodward) Goodwin, was born about 1639, and died in East Hartford, Connecticut, February 12, 1723-24. She married, 1660-61, William Pitkin. (See Pitkin I.)

Coles—Cowles

Arms—Gules, a chevron ermine between three leopards' heads or.

Crest—An eagle displayed argent, ducally gorged and membered or.

THE family name Cole, and its possessive Coles, also its later form Cowles, are derived from Cole, pet Christian name for Nicholas, which is from the Greek Nikolaos, meaning "victory of the people." The name of Rand fil. Cole occurs in the "Cartularium Abbathiae de Whiteby," thirteenth century, and as a family name, Elias Cole, is recorded in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, A. D. 1379.

I

JOHN COLES (or Cowles) arrived in Massachusetts about 1635, was in Hartford, Connecticut, before 1639, and in Farmington in 1640. In the Farmington records his name is spelled Coles and Colles, and finally, in 1652, Cowles. He was a farmer and is thought to be the brother of James Cole, of Hartford, 1639. About 1664 he removed to that part of Hadley, Massachusetts, which is now Hatfield, where he was Freeman, 1666, and died in 1675. His widow, Hannah, died in Hartford, in 1684.

Children:

1. John, born about 1641.
2. Hannah, of whom further.
3. Sarah, baptized February 7, 1646; married, 1664, Nathaniel Goodwin.
4. Mary, married a Dickinson.
5. Elizabeth, married, 1675, Richard Lyman.
6. Samuel, married, June 14, 1661, Abigail Stanley, daughter of Timothy Stanley. (See Stanley I.)
7. Ester, married, 1669, Thomas Ball.

II

HANNAH COWLES, daughter of John and Hannah Coles (or Cowles), was born in Farmington, Connecticut, in 1643, and died February 7, 1690. She married, in 1665, Caleb Stanley, son of Timothy and Elizabeth Stanley. (See Stanley II.)

Hollister
(Hollist)

Hollister

Hollist—Hollister Arms—Sable, on a bend between a greyhound courant, bendways in chief, and a dolphin hauriant in base, argent three torteaux, on a chief of the second three sprigs of strawberry fructed proper.

Crest—Between two sprigs of strawberry, as in the arms, a dexter arm embowed in armour, the hand within a gauntlet, holding a sprig of holly, all proper.

Motto—Fuimus, et sub Deo erimus. (We have been, and under the power of God, we shall be.)

HE name dates back to as early as the first half of the sixteenth century, and is derived from the words "holly" and "terra." It signifies Hollyland, or the place of hollies. The family is said to be from Bristol, England, where in 1608 a John Hollister was Lord of the Manor of Stinchcombe. After the establishment of the Protectorate in 1654, a Dennis Hollister was a member of Cromwell's Privy Council.

I

JOHN HOLLISTER, SR., was born in Glastonbury, a market town in Somersetshire, England, in 1612. He emigrated from Bristol in 1642 and settled at Weymouth, Massachusetts, where he was admitted a Freeman in 1643, and chosen Deputy to the following session of the Massachusetts General Court. Before June, 1644, he became a resident of Wethersfield, Connecticut, and during that month was one of the members of a Particular Court held at Hartford, Connecticut. He was chosen Deputy to the General Court of Connecticut in September, 1644, and was reëlected fourteen times. He was appointed by the Legislature, in 1654, on a committee "to press men and necessities, in each town, for the expedition to the Narragansett Country, against Ninigrate." Various other legislative appointments and popular elections to office are a tribute to the high esteem in which he was held. In 1657 he was called "Lieutenant," and he is described as a "gentleman of undoubted probity and steadiness of purpose." He died in April, 1665, aged fifty-three years. He married Joanna Treat, who died in October, 1694, daughter of Richard and Alice (Gaylord) Treat. (See Treat II.)

Children of John and Joanna (Treat) Hollister:

1. Mary, married John Welles, of Stratford, Connecticut.

RECORD of the family Trott, varied since about 1550 to Tratt, and in America to Treat, is frequently found in the Exchequer Lay Subsidies of County Somerset, A. D. 1327, and in Kirby's Quest, of the same year. The surname of Nicholas Truhyt, Thomas Trut, John Trout, and even earlier, Richard fil. Truite, A. D. 1179, show the development from the Christian name Truit, Troit, or Trote, which appears in the Norse as Thrudr, and which the Danes brought into England. In the records of Bishop—Middleham, County York, in 1683, the surnames Troth Bradshau, and Trott several times occur. In the Norse, Thrudr is feminine, meaning constancy or fortitude, and it appears in the Germanic Ger-trude and Hil-trud.

Rice

Arms—Argent, on a chevron engrailed sable between three reindeer heads erased gules, as many cinquefoils ermine.

HIS name is of Welsh origin, being a variant of the Welsh name Rhys. From South Wales it spread throughout the United Kingdom, and at the present time is well represented all over the world.

In an illuminated pedigree of the family, drawn and attested by Ralph Brook, York Herald, the Rice family is found to be descended from Vyron Reged, Lord of Kidwelly, Corunllon and Yskenen, by Margaret La Faye, his wife, daughter of Gorlois, Duke of Cornwall. Sir Rhys ap-Thomas, nineteenth in descent from Gorlois, was founder of the English house of Rice. Of this distinguished person, Fuller, in his "Worthies," writes: "Sir Rhys ap-Thomas of Elmalen in Carmarthen, was never more than a knight, and yet a little less than a prince in his native country."

King Henry VII, for help that Sir Rhys ap-Thomas had given him, made the latter a Knight Banneret, and later a Knight Companion of the Most Noble Order of the Garter. Sir Rhys was son of Thomas ap Griffith, and his first wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Griffith, Knight. His descent is traced as follows: Vyron Reged had Pasgen, who had Mor, who had Ririd, who had Llowarch, who had Run, who had Seysseyelt, who had Gwrward, who had Anarawd, and who had Kynhaithwy, who had Llowarch, who had Einion, who had Grony. The last named married Lliwelydd v Einion Klud, Arglwydd y ddwy Elvall, of Radnorshire. They had Elider, who married Gladys, daughter of Philip ap Buck; and who had Philip, who married Gladys, daughter of David Fras, Esquire.

The latter had Nicholas, who married the second daughter of Griffith ap Llewelyn Voethus. Their son Griffid, married Mable Dwinn; their son Sir Thomas ap-Griffith married Elizabeth Griffith; their son, Rhys ap-Thomas, married Mabel, daughter of Harry ap Willam, Esquire, and by her had a son, Sir Griffith ap Rhys, Ryce or Rice.

Sir Griffith Ryce or Rice married Catherine St. John, daughter of Sir John and Sybil (daughter of Morgan ap Jenkyn Philip) St. John, and they were parents of four children. One of these, Rhys ap Griffith Rice, had Griffith Rice, who was the grandfather of the first American ancestor.

Deacon Edmund Rice, grandson of Griffith, son of Rhys ap Griffith Rhys, or Rice, was born in Buckinghamshire (probably in Sudbury), in 1594.

Rice

I

DEACON EDMUND RICE, the original American ancestor of this line, was a great-great-grandson of Sir Griffith Rice, who was made a Knight of the Bath at the marriage of Arthur, Prince of Wales, in 1501. Edmund Rice and his wife Tamazine^{Hezner} were living, in 1627, in the village of Berkhamstead, twenty-eight miles north of London, in Hertfordshire. Their first three children were doubtless born in Sudbury, Buckinghamshire, and five others were baptized at Berkhamstead. Edmund Rice, and his wife, with seven of these children (one had died and one was born during the voyage) landed in Massachusetts, in 1638. In 1639 he was living at Sudbury, Massachusetts, on the east side of the Sudbury River in the southerly part of what is now Wayland. He was a Selectman in 1644 and after, and became a deacon in 1648. In 1656 he was one of thirteen petitioners who besought the General Court for a new plantation. In 1660 he removed to the said new plantation, Marlboro, and was there granted fifty acres of land. He died at Marlboro, Massachusetts, May 3, 1663, and was buried at Sudbury.

His first wife, Tamazine Rice, died in Sudbury, June 13, 1654, and he married (second), March 1, 1655, Mercie Brigham, widow of Thomas Brigham, of Cambridge, who had come to Massachusetts in 1635.

Children of Edmund and Tamazine Rice:

1. Henry, born in 1617; married Eliza Moore.
2. Edward, born in 1619; married (first) Agnes Bent; (second) Anna, surname unknown, who was the mother of all his children.
3. Thomas, born about 1622; married Mary King.
4. Lydia, born in March, 1627; married Hugh Drury.
5. Matthew, born in 1629; married Martha Lamson.
6. Daniel, baptized November 1, 1632, died the same month.
7. Samuel, born in 1634; married Elizabeth King.
8. Joseph, born in 1637; married Mercy King.
9. Edmund, born at sea, in 1638.
10. Benjamin, born May 31, 1640; married Mary Brown.

Edmund and Mercie Rice had two children:

11. Ruth, of further mention.
12. Ann, born at Marlboro, November 19, 1661; married Nathaniel Berry.

II

RUTH RICE, daughter of Deacon Edmund and Mercie Rice, was born in Sudbury, Massachusetts, September 29, 1659. She married Captain Samuel Welles. (See Welles III.)

HIS name Edwards (or Edwardes) is derived from a font name, or Christian name, which originally appeared as Eadward and Edweard. It is Saxon in character and is in a class with the names associated with the kings of the Aetheling dynasty in England, who were the first of the name of whom we have knowledge. Edward, Edmund, Eghard, Egbert, Alfred, or Ealfred, and Edgar have come through the generations, perhaps somewhat changed in form, but with their original characteristics still remaining. Thus we have Edwards, Edmon, Eckhard and Eckert, Edison and Edson.

When William the Conqueror established himself over the greater part of Britain, many of the original Saxons fled to Wales. Here several families of Edwardesons or Edwards arose, who were originally of Celtic stock. From one of these families descended the Barons of Kensington, the arms of whose family are given above. Rev. Richard Edwards, of Wales and London, died in England, and his mother, Ann, married James Cole, who came to America with his family, which included the stepson, William Edwards, of further mention.

I

WILLIAM EDWARDS, son of Rev. Richard and Ann Edwards, was the founder of the Hartford branch of the American family. He came to this country with his mother and step-father, James Cole, and was in Hartford, Connecticut, about 1640-45. He married, about 1645, Agnes Spencer, widow of William Spencer, of Hartford, the last named of whom had been in Cambridge, Massachusetts, as early as 1631, and had died before May 4, 1640. She was plaintiff in an "action of debt" March 6, 1673, her son Richard acting as her attorney. William and Agnes Edwards had but one child:

1. Richard, of whom further.

II

RICHARD EDWARDS, son of William and Agnes Edwards, of Hartford, Connecticut, was born in May, 1647, and died April 20, 1718. His will, made at Hartford, is on record. He was a merchant and owned land "in the long meadow at Hartford," and "by the road leading to Windsor," also in Colchester. He married (first), November 19, 1667, Elizabeth Tuttle, daughter of William and Elizabeth Tuttle, of England, and in New Haven, Connecticut. She was baptized in New Haven, November 9, 1645. He was divorced from her, and he married (second), about 1691, Mary Talcott, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel John Talcott, of Hartford, who was Treasurer of the Colony for nineteen years, and distinguished himself as an officer in King Philip's War. Her mother was Helena (Wakeman) Talcott. (See Talcott III.)

Children of Richard Edwards and his first wife, Elizabeth (Tuttle) Edwards:

1. Mary, born in 1668.
2. Timothy, born May 14, 1669; married Esther Stoddard; in 1691 he received two degrees at Harvard, Bachelor of Arts, and Master of Arts; he was a noted preacher, and was father of the celebrated Rev. Jonathan Edwards.
3. Abigail, born in 1671; married (first) Benjamin Lathrop; (second), in 1697, as his second wife, Captain Thomas Stoughton.
4. Elizabeth, born in 1675; married (first) Jacob Deming; (second), after 1702, a Mr. Hinckley.
5. Ann, born 1678; married (first) Jonathan Richardson; (second), in 1702, as his second wife, William Davenport.
6. Mabel, baptized December 13, 1685, died May 16, 1765, in her eightieth year; married Jonathan Bigelow.
7. Martha, whose history is unknown.

Children of Richard and Mary (Talcott) Edwards:

8. Jonathan, born June 20, 1692, died March 21, 1693.
9. John, born February 27, 1694; married Christian Williamson.
10. Hannah, born January 3, 1696; married Joseph Backus, Jr.
11. Richard, born January 5, 1698, died May 20, 1713.
12. Daniel, born April 11, 1701; married Sarah Hooker, granddaughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker.
13. Samuel, of whom further.

III

SAMUEL EDWARDS, son of Richard and Mary (Talcott) Edwards, was born in Hartford, Connecticut, November 1, 1702, and died November

4, 1732, aged thirty years. He resided in Hartford. He left eight hundred pounds to his widow, his entire estate being inventoried at more than twenty-five hundred pounds. He married, March 1, 1731, Jerusha Pitkin, daughter of William and Elizabeth (Stanley) Pitkin. (See Pitkin II.) She was born June 22, 1710, and died July 31, 1799, "in the eighty-ninth year of her age." After the death of Mr. Edwards, she married (second), November 17, 1737, Rev. Ashbel Woodbridge, and had nine children by the second marriage. Samuel and Jerusha (Pitkin) Edwards had only one child:

THE family name Harlakenden means "of Harlakenden," now Woodchurch Parish, County Kent, England, anciently called the Borough of Harlakenden, or the vale of Harlaken. The name is derived from the Anglo-Norman harlaken, a harlequin or buffoon; and the place-ending, den, a vale or small valley, in the south of England, denoting especially a deep, wooded vale.

In the "Visitations of Essex," 1612 (Harleian Society Publications, Vol. XIII, page 210) is the Latin inscription of the earliest known Harlakenden, from the ancient tomb in the south chancel of Woodchurch Parish Church, followed by the English translation "William Harlakenden esquier obiit (died) 30 of Aprell 1081." The direct line from William Harlakenden to Rev. John Elliott is as follows:

- I. WILLIAM HARLAKENDEN, died April 30, 1081 A. D.

They came from England with Governor John Winthrop in 1630, and settled first in Roxbury, Massachusetts, where she died in 1630. He married (second) Frances Sanford, of Roxbury, and led a colony in 1636 to Agawam, which he named Springfield, after his father's county seat in England. After residing with this colony and governing it until 1652, he was deposed from office in consequence of writing a book deemed heretical on the subject of Christ's atonement. He returned in September, 1652, with his son-in-law, Henry Smith, who had accompanied him to New England, and with the Rev. John Moxom, his minister, settled in Wyrardisbury, where his second wife died October 10, 1657.

Cullick

Cullick-Collet Arms—Sable, on a chevron between three hinds trippant argent as many annulets of the first.

Crest—A hind trippant argent.

THE name Cullick seems to be a corruption of the family name Collet, for in the following family it is sometimes spelled Cullit. Colet, Collet, or Collect, as a family name is derived from Colet, an old English pet name for Nicholas. Colet de Soutre is on record in the Hundred Rolls of County Huntingdon, and Walter Colet in the Hundred Rolls of Shropshire, 1273 A. D.

I

JOHN CULLICK was one of the original proprietors of Hartford, Connecticut, and had a town lot assigned to him in 1639, having arrived in Massachusetts earlier. Hinman records that John Cullick remained in the Massachusetts Colony after the first company had settled Hartford, of which he became a citizen in 1641. In 1642 he was foreman of a jury at Hartford; in 1643 he was one of the Selectmen; Deputy in 1644, 1646, and 1647; Assistant and Magistrate 1648 to 1654; and Secretary of Connecticut Colony from 1648 to 1657, inclusive; a member of the General Court in some capacity from 1643 to 1657; and he was Commissioner to the convention of the United Colonies in 1653 and 1655. He removed to Boston in 1658, his wife being an heir in the estate of her brother, George Fenwick, who died in the spring of 1657, the settlement of his American estate devolving upon Mr. Cullick, and M. Leverett, of Boston. John Cullick was of Felstead, County Essex, Engand, and died in Boston, Massachusetts, January 23, 1663. He was married twice, but the name of his first wife is unknown. He married (second), May 20, 1648, Elizabeth Fenwick, only sister of George Fenwick, who was in charge at Saybrook Fort, Connecticut, 1639 to 1644, but was Governor at Berwick-on-Tweed at the time of his death.

St. John

Arms—Argent, on a chief gules two mullets or.

Crest—A mount vert, therefrom a falcon rising, or, belled of the last, ducally gorged gules.

THE English aristocracy includes only a few families more ancient than that of St. John, which takes its name from the village St. Jean-le-Thomas overlooking the bay of Mont St. Michel, in the extreme west of Normandy, Department de la Manche. A document in the Cartulary of Mont St. Michel, dated 1121 A. D., concerns a dispute between the monks of the abbey, and Thomas, John, and Roger St. Jean (English St. John). John and Roger are spoken of by Orderic Vitalis as being with Henry I of England in Normandy in 1119, while Thomas appears in Oxfordshire as early as 1111, when he seems to have been joint Sheriff. He also, in 1112, gave some land to Gloucester Abbey; but in 1130 he was dead, and his brother John purchased his estate "in England" for one hundred and sixty marcs. This was Stanton St. John in County Oxford. Roger was heir to Thomas' estate in Normandy. Roger de St. John was in 1130, of Compton in County Sussex, and married Cecily, daughter of Robert de Haia, lord of the Honor of Halnaker in Sussex. They had William, Robert, and Muriel. Muriel married Reginald de Orval. Their daughter Mabel married Adam de Port, a powerful baron, Lord of Basing in County Southampton. (Round, the authority for the place of Roger, gives documentary evidence that he was the brother, not the son, of John de St. John, as hitherto accepted.)

Adam de Port left a son, William, who assumed the name St. John. The de Port line is from Hugh de Port, of Basing, 1086 A. D., through his son Henry, Sheriff of Hampshire, who had John of Basing, 1148-1167, the father of Adam. William "de St. Jean" of Basing, succeeded his father, Adam de Port, 1213 A. D., and became the ancestor of the St. Johns of Fonmon (Burke's Faumont) in Glamorganshire, South Wales, and of the Bletso, Bedfordshire, branch, with the Earls of Bolingbroke, the earldom expiring in 1711, and the present barons St. John.

THE family name Lee means "at the lea" or grassy plain. Henry de las Lee is on record in the Hundred Rolls of Cambridgeshire, 1273 A. D. Johannes del Lee, in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, 1379 A. D. Many others might be cited.

I

THOMAS LEE embarked for New England about 1641, but died on the voyage. His family landed at Boston, Massachusetts, but soon proceeded to Saybrook, Connecticut. The father of his wife Phebe is called "Brown of Providence," though Lee's marriage was in England, hence Brown must have emigrated.

Mott

Arms—Sable, a crescent argent.

THE family name Mott means "at the moat," old French and Anglo-Norman mote, a dike or embankment. Saundrina de la Mote is on record in the Wardrobe Account, 1348-50. It is occasionally from the Christian-name Mott, or Maut, for Matilda or her son. John Mott had lands in Shalford, near Braintree, County Essex, England, in 1375.

I

THOMAS MOTT, of Braintree, married Alice Meade, of Bocking.
Children, born in Braintree, England:

THE family name Wakeman is an old English and dialectic equivalent, mainly North of England, of "watchman." In Yorkshire, the chief magistrate of a town was called "wakeman." Johannes Wakeman is on record in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, 1379 A. D.; and Jacob Waykman in the early "Valor Ecclesiasticus" of County Norfolk.

FRANCIS WAKEMAN, of Bewdley, Worcestershire, England, died September 2, 1626. He is probably descended from one of the brothers of John Wakeman, bishop of the Diocese of Gloucester (appointed 1541 by Henry VIII), or from one of Bishop John Wakeman's brothers. He married, at Eastham, now in Tenbury, Anne Goode, who died January 29, 1621.

THE FAMILY IN AMERICA

I

JOHN WAKEMAN, son of Francis and Anne (Goode) Wakeman, was born at Bewdley, England, in 1598-99, and died at Hartford, Connecticut, where inventory of his estate was taken, October 21, 1661. He is first mentioned in America in the list of Freemen "of the Courte of Newhaven," held June 4, 1639. The next is his autograph signature to the articles of agreement of both church and State of the Colony of New Haven. He was chosen Deputy of "New Haven Plantation" in 1641, 1642, 1643, 1644, 1646, 1655-1658, and often as a counsellor on town matters. He was chosen Treasurer of the Colony in 1656, and reëlected in 1657, 1658, 1659, and 1660. He was deacon of the first church in New Haven. He married, at Bewdley, January 28, 1628-29, Elizabeth Hopkins, baptized in Ribbesford Church, England, October 10, 1610, died at New Haven, Connecticut, 1658, daughter of William and Helen (Vickaris) Hopkins.

Children, born in Bewdley, England:

1. John, baptized July 25, 1630, died January 19, 1636.
2. Helena, of whom further.
3. Samuel, baptized June 7, 1635, died March 8, 1692.
4. Elizabeth, baptized September 16, 1638; married, March 16, 1656-1657, Samuel Kitchell, of Newark, New Jersey.

II

HELENA WAKEMAN, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Hopkins) Wakeman, baptized December 23, 1632, died June 22, 1674, at Hartford, Connecticut. She married, October 29, 1650, Lieutenant-Colonel John Talcott, son of John and Dorothy (Mott) Talcott. (See Talcott II.)

Gibbons

Arms—Gules, a lion rampant or, over all on a bend argent three crosses pattée sable.

Crest—A lion's gamb erased gules, holding a cross pattée fitchée.

THE family name Gibbons is the possessive of the Christian-name Gibbon meaning "little Gilbert." Gibun de Mortemer is on record at Ripon, Yorkshire, in Memorials of the Church of SS. Peter and Wilfred, in the time of Edward II, and Robert Gybbon in the Rolls of Parliament, 1307 A. D.

The Gibbons knightly family of Warwickshire, and later of Oxfordshire, springs from John Gibbons, alias Payne, of Little Sutton, Warwickshire. William, his son and heir, married Anne, daughter of William Harman, of the neighboring town, Sutton Goldfield, and had a son Thomas, of Ditchley in Oxfordshire, and daughters Alicia and Anna. Thomas married (first) Eleanor Arden, daughter and sole heir of Martin Arden; and (second) Elizabeth Perpoint, of London. Thomas and Eleanor (Arden) Gibbons had daughters, Margareta, and Maria, and son Thomas, who married Sibilla Lisle or Lisley, of Mocksell, County Warwick, and they had Francis and Thomas. Thomas and his second wife, Elizabeth Perpoint, had William, Edmund, John, and Elinor. Francis, who was born in 1566, was the heir.

I

WILLIAM GIBBONS, of whom we have no record of parentage, but apparently of the younger branch of the above family, was sent with twenty men by George Wyllys, of Fenny Compton, Warwickshire, in 1636, as agent to prepare a settlement for his employer, who in 1638 came to Hartford, Connecticut, where we find William Gibbons on record in land transactions from February, 1639 to 1654. He is entered on the membership rolls of the First Church under the date 1641. His inventory was taken December 2, 1655. His will, dated February 26, 1654-55, gives the name of his wife Ursula, and names of the children living at that time, and of brothers Richard, John, and Thomas in England, and sister, Mrs. Hidgecock (Hitchcock).

Children, born at Hartford, Connecticut:

1. Mary, under age in will.
2. Sarah, born August 17, 1645; married James Richards, about 1660.
(See Richards II.)

CLARKE

Arms—Gules, two bars argent, in chief three escallops or.

Crest—An escallop quarterly gules and or.

The family name Clarke is derived from the office of clerk, a clergyman, Latin clericus. Boniface Clericus and Thomas le Clerk are both on record in the Hundred Rolls of Lincolnshire, 1273 A. D.; and Robertus Clarke in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, 1379 A. D. Clark, which is merely the broad pronunciation of Clerk, has now almost superseded the older form.

I .

JOHN CLARKE, probably of Great Munden in Hertfordshire, was made Freeman at Newtown, now Cambridge, Massachusetts, November 6, 1632, but removed with Rev. Thomas Hooker's company in 1636 to Hartford, Connecticut, where John Clarke's name is on the monument erected to the first settlers of Hartford, in Center Church Cemetery. He was a soldier in the Pequot War in 1637, and served as a juror in Hartford in 1641. He removed to Saybrook, Connecticut, in 1645 or 1646. In 1647 he, with Captain John Mason, was appointed by the General Court to carry on the building of the fort at Saybrook. He was one of the nineteen petitioners to Charles II in 1662 for the Charter of Connecticut secured by Governor Winthrop, and was one of the most prominent citizens of Saybrook. In 1662 or 1663, he with a number of others moved to Norwich, Connecticut, and established a church there; shortly after, he removed to Milford, Connecticut, where his brother George was living, and on September 24, 1665, he received his dismissal from the church at Norwich, and was admitted to the church in Milford. He died in Milford, February 5, 1674. He married (first) in England. He married (second) Mrs. Mary Ward Fletcher.

Children, the first three born in England:

1. John, married Rebecca Porter.
2. Joseph, died at sea, in 1663. He was married, but had no children.
3. Elizabeth, married Lieutenant William Pratt.
4. Sarah, died in 1721; married Deacon Simon Huntington. (See Huntington II.)

Miller

Arms—Per fesse argent and azure, in chief two wolves' heads erased purpure, collared or; and in base a lion passant of the last.

Crest—A wolf's head erased, per pale, or and purpure, collared gold.

As a surname, Miller is found in every State of the United States, and in every part of the world where the English tongue is spoken. The earliest records of medieval England contain numerous entries of the name. The family name Miller is from the occupation of miller, one who grinds grain; a variation of the Anglo-Saxon mylnere, later, Latin molinarium. John le Mellere appears in Writs of Parliament about 1300 A. D.

Several immigrants left the mother country during the period of Colonial settlement, and became the founders in New England of Miller families, which have been prominent in the life and development of the country for a period of more than two hundred and seventy years. In the early Colonial records, in the annals of the later commonwealths, and in the muster rolls of all our wars, the name of Miller is found with great frequency. Men of the name have risen to prominence in the fields of industry, business, and finance, in professional life, and in the divine calling, and the family ranks today among the most honorable of those which go to make up the aristocracy of New England.

Entries of the name Miller appear in the parish records of Sussex County, England, as early as the year 1300. In 1530 many of the name are recorded as large landholders.

I

GEORGE MILLER was in New London, Connecticut, as early as 1679, a resident on the east side of the river, now Groton; and he may be the George Miller who is on the list of early settlers of Southold, Long Island (which furnished several settlers to New London), and connected with the Millers of Easthampton of the George Miller line. George Miller, of New London, died in 1690. The name of his wife, who came with him to New London, is not known, nor the dates of birth of his children.

Children:

1. Mary, who married Stephen Loomer.
2. Elizabeth, second wife of Edward Stallion.

MATILDA OF FLANDERS.

The portraits of both William the Conqueror and his queen-consort, Matilda, were carefully preserved on the walls of St. Stephen's Chapel at Caen, until the middle of the seventeenth century. These portraits were painted by order of the Queen when this magnificent endowment, upon which she bestowed so much of wealth and interest, was founded. We are indebted to the antiquarian Montfaucon, for the present-day knowledge of this portrait; a copy being found in his invaluable work, "Les Monumens de la monarchie française."

HENRY I OF ENGLAND

MATILDA OF SCOTLAND.

This portrait of Matilda, queen-consort of Henry I, is from the Golden Book of St. Albans in the British Museum. This is a kind of conventual album in which are recorded the portraits of the benefactors of the abbey, together with an account of their donations. The book was not started until the fourteenth century, and while the entering of the portrait of Matilda was delayed until that time, the picture was undoubtedly designed in the Queen's own day. The artists of the middle ages drew only what they saw, and the style of dress and the form of the throne belong emphatically to the period of Henry I and Matilda.

EFFIGY OF GEOFFRY PLANTAGENET

GEOFFREY PLANTAGENET.

Effigy of Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou, from his tomb at Le Mans.

Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, married Matilda, daughter and heiress of Henry I. (See Anjou X and Royal Pedigree XXIII), and from this marriage sprang the line of Plantagenet, Kings of England. The name Plantagenet was a nickname of Geoffrey, Count of Anjou, and was derived from his wearing in his cap a sprig of the broom (genet) plant, "which in early summer makes the open country of Anjou and Maine a blaze of living gold."

THE CASTLE OF FALAISE.

The picturesque Castle of Falaise will always be known best as the birthplace of William the Conqueror, son of Duke Robert of Normandy and Arlette, daughter of a tanner. The castle, one of the most interesting of the Norman Castles of France was most strongly fortified, a place indeed constructed for war; the ease and comfort of civilization had no part in its building. In a room a little better than a cell or a cave in a vast mountain of masonry, William the Conqueror of England was born.

I

WILLIAM OF NORMANDY, later known as William the Conqueror, was born in 1027 or 1028, bastard son of Robert, Duke of Normandy, sometimes called Robert the Devil, and of Arietta, daughter of a tanner of Falaise; and grandson of Richard II, Duke of Normandy. In 1034 Robert of Normandy induced his barons to acknowledge William as his successor. The following year he died on the return journey from Jerusalem, and the barons kept their promise by acknowledging the lordship of the boy William. The conquest of England in 1066 and the years immediately following gained for William the title of Conqueror, as well as that of King William I of England. Recent authorities state that though in England many legends survive of arms borne by the Conqueror and his companions, nothing is more certain than that no armorial bearings appeared on either side of the Battle of Hastings. The arms described herewith are as recorded by Burke in his "Royal Armory."

William I married Matilda (sometimes recorded as Maud), daughter of Baldwin V of Flanders, who traced descent in the female line from Alfred the Great.

II

HENRY I, fourth and youngest son of William I and Matilda of Flanders, was known as Beauclerc. He is recorded in Burke's "Royal Armory" as bearing arms identical with those of his father. He married, in 1100, Matilda, daughter of Malcolm III, King of Scotland. (See Royal Pedigree XXII.) He married (second), 1121, Adelaide, daughter of Godfrey, Count of Louvain. No issue by second marriage.

III

MATILDA, daughter of Henry I and Edith Matilda of Scotland, died in 1167. She married Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou. (See Royal Pedigree XXIII and Anjou X.) They were the parents of Henry II (q. v.).

HENRY II OF ENGLAND

Arms—Gules, three lions passant guardant or.

IV

HENRY II, of England, son of Geoffrey Plantagenet and Matilda, was born at Le Mans, March 25, 1133, and died at Chinon, July 6, 1189. He at first bore arms the same as those of his grandfather and his great-grandfather. After his marriage to Eleanor, of Aquitaine, in 1152, he adopted a third lion. He was the first monarch who used a badge, adopting for that purpose, first, an escarbuncle of gold, an ancient mark of his paternal house of Anjou. Later, he introduced the sprig of broom plant or planta genesta, from which the surname Plantagenet was derived. He is also said to have borne a jennet between two sprigs of broom. Burke's "Royal Armory" records the coat-of-arms blazoned herewith. (See Royal Pedigree XXIV.)

EDWARD III OF ENGLAND

Arms—Quarterly, first and fourth (France) azure, semée of fleurs-de-lis or; second and third (England) gules, three lions passant guardant or.
Crest—Upon a chapeau gules, turned up ermine, a lion passant guardant crowned or.

V

KING JOHN, son of King Henry II (q. v.) and Eleanor, of Aquitaine (see Royal Pedigree XXV), prior to his elevation to the throne, bore only two lions, as his father had borne. After his accession, he assumed the arms of his brother and predecessor, Richard, and of his father. The badge of King John was the crescent surmounted by a star, this having been a badge of King Richard, as was also the motto Dieu et mon droit (God and my right hand).

King John married Isabella, of Angoulême, and they were the parents of King Henry III, of whom further.

VI

KING HENRY III (reigned 1216-1272), son of King John and Isabella, of Angoulême, bore arms as those of his father. He married Eleanor, daughter of Raimond Berenger IV, of Provence. They were the parents of King Edward I. (See House of Savoy VIII.)

VII

KING EDWARD I (reigned 1272-1307), son of King Henry III, bore the same arms as his father. He married Eleanor, daughter of Ferdinand III of Castile. (See Castile VIII.) They were the parents of Edward II.

ROCKINGHAM CASTLE.

Situated in Rockingham Forest on a natural rise well calculated to fit the need of protection was Rockingham Castle, old Saxon stronghold of the chief Bovi and later chosen by the Conqueror. The forest was Royal Domain and one of the largest in the Kingdom and it is possible that the first fortress was erected by King William I as a hunting lodge. King John presented it to his wife Isabella. In the reign of Edward I it is estimated that £20,000 of our money was spent in repairs. Rockingham remained a royal possession for over 400 years and was the scene of many stirring events during the period of the Civil War.

ELEANORA OF CASTILE.

The portrait of Eleanora (Eleanor) of Castile, queen-consort of Edward I, taken from her monument in Westminster Abbey, is of singular interest. She is surnamed "the faithful" and to her beloved memory the King paid high tribute. Her death occurred during the troublous time when Scottish affairs were pressing hard upon the monarch. But affairs of state and war were obliterated from King Edward's mind by the sorrow he felt at Eleanor's death. All affairs of state were suspended during the obsequies. In deep grief he followed her body in person during the thirteen days' progress from Grantham to Westminster. Along the way, the royal bier was carried to rest, at stages in the journey, in some central part of a great town. As it reposed, the neighboring ecclesiastics came to meet it in solemn procession, and to place it before the high altar of the principal church. At each of these resting places the royal mourner vowed to erect a cross in memory of the chère reine, as he called his lost Eleanor. In all, thirteen of these monuments were erected, that of Northampton still remaining.

(Agnes Strickland—"Lives of the Queens of England.")

IX

EDWARD III, son of Edward II and Isabella of France, reigned as King of France and England from 1327 to 1377. He married Phillipa, daughter of William I of Hainault. (See Hainault X.) CASTILE, an ancient kingdom of Spain, is said to have derived its name from the numerous frontier forts (castillos) erected in the Middle Ages as a defence against the Moors. The transformation of Castile from a small county in the north of what is now old Castile into an independent monarchy was one of the decisive events in the reconquest of Spain from the Moors. Ferdinand I of Castile (1035-1065), by his marriage with Sancha (Sancia), widow and heiress of the last king of Leon, was enabled to unite Leon and Castile in a single kingdom with its capital at Burgos. The arms described herewith are the ancient royal arms of Castile.

I

FERDINAND I married Sancha, heiress of Leon. (See Kings of Aragon XI.) They had a son Alphonso.

II

ALPHONSO VI, son of Ferdinand I and Sancha, reigned in Castile from 1065 to 1109. He married Constance, daughter of Robert, Duke of Burgundy.

ELEANOR, daughter of Ferdinand III of Castile, and Joanna, married King Edward I of England. (See Royal Pedigree XXVII, and King Edward III, line VII.)

ROYAL LINE OF PORTUGAL

Arms—Argent, five inescutcheons azure, one, three and one, each charged with five plates, two, one and two, a bordure gules, charged with seven towers or, doors and windows azure.

Helmet—Affronté or, crowned of the same.

Crest—A dragon issuant, wings displayed or.

Supporters—Two winged dragons vert, each holding a banneret; the dexter argent, charged with the five inescutcheons of the arms, the sinister gules, with seven towers or, two, two, two and one, doors and windows azure.

The origin of Portugal as a separate state was an incident in the Christian re-conquest of Spain from the Moors. Towards the close of the eleventh century crusading knights came from every part of Europe to aid the kings of northern and central Spain in driving out the Moors. Among these adventurers was Count Henry of Burgundy, an ambitious warrior, who married Theresa, natural daughter of Alfonso VI. The County of Portugal, which had already been won back from the Moors (1055-1064), was included in Theresa's dowry. His line is traced as follows:

I

ROBERT, King of the Franks or of France.

II

ROBERT, Duke of Burgundy, son of Robert, King of France.

III

HENRY, died 1066; married Sibylla.

IV

HENRY, Count of Burgundy and later of Portugal, son of Henry and Sibylla, held the countship from 1093 to 1112. He married, in 1095, Theresa, daughter of Alfonso VI of Castile, who was also King of Leon. They were the parents of Alfonso I of Portugal.

V

ALFONSO I, of Portugal, son of Henry, Count of Portugal, and Theresa, was born in 1112 and died in 1185. He became King of Portugal in 1139. He married Matilda, daughter of Amedus of Maurienne.

VI

URRACA, daughter of Alfonso I and Matilda, married Ferdinand II of Castile. (See Castile V.)

House of Capet

Arms—Azure, semé of fleurs-de-lis or.

APET is the name of a family to which, for nearly nine centuries, the kings of France and many of the rulers of the most powerful fiefs in that country belonged, and which mingled with several of the other royal races of Europe. The original significance of the name remains in dispute, but the first of the family to which it was applied was Hugh, who was elected King of the Franks in 987. The real founder of the house, however, was Robert the Strong, who received from Charles the Bald, King of the Franks, the countships of Anjou and Blois, and who is sometimes called duke, as he exercised some military authority in the district between the Seine and the Loire. According to Aimoin of Saint-Germain-des-Prés, and the chronicler, Richer, he was a Saxon, but historians question this statement. Descent is traced as follows:

I

ROBERT THE STRONG, Count of Anjou and Blois, sometimes called Duke of Anjou and Blois.

II

ROBERT, second Count or Duke of Anjou and Blois, also King Robert I of France, or, more accurately, King of the Franks, was the younger son of Robert the Strong, Count of Anjou, and the brother of Odo (or Eudes), who became King of the western Franks in 888. He was himself crowned King of the Franks at Reims, June 20, 922, but Charles III marched against him, and he was killed in a battle near Soissons, June 15, 923.

III

HUGH THE GREAT, son of Robert I, became Duke of France and Burgundy, his domain extending from the Loire to the frontiers of Picardy. He married Hedwiga, daughter of Henry I of Germany. He had a son Hugh, of whom further.

IV

HUGH CAPET, son of Hugh the Great, was crowned King of the Franks at Reims, in 987, reigned to 996. The house of Capet continued to rule in France from 987 to 1328.

V

ROBERT II, King of France, was a son of Hugh Capet, born at Orleans and educated at Reims. He reigned from 996 to 1031. He married (first) Bertha, daughter of Conrad, King of Burgundy.

VI

HENRY I reigned from 1031 to 1060. He married Anne of Russia.

VII

PHILIP I reigned from 1060 to 1081. He married Bertha, daughter of the Count of Holland.

VIII

LOUIS VI reigned from 1081 to 1137. He married Adelaide, daughter of Humbert II, Count of Maurienne. (See House of Savoy IV.)

IX

LOUIS VII reigned from 1137 to 1180. He married (third) Alice, daughter of Theobald, Count of Champagne.

X

PHILIP II reigned from 1180 to 1223. He married (first) Isabella, daughter of Count of Hainault.

XI

LOUIS VIII reigned from 1223 to 1226. He married Blanche, daughter of Alfonso VIII of Castile.

XII

LOUIS IX reigned from 1226 to 1270. He married Margaret, daughter of Count of Provence.

XIII

PHILIP III reigned from 1270 to 1285. He married (first), 1262, Isabella, daughter of James I, King of Aragon. He married (second), in 1274, Mary, daughter of Henry III, Duke of Brabant.

XIV

PHILIP IV, son of Philip III and Isabella, reigned from 1285 to 1314. He married Jeanne, heiress of Champagne and Navarre.

HENEAGE

Arms—Or, a greyhound courant sable between three leopards' faces azure, a bordure engrailed gules.

Crest—A greyhound courant sable.

Lower's "Patronymica Britannica" derives the family name Heneage from a place not now found on the map, but cites Sir Robert de Heneage, who was in Lincolnshire in the time of William Rufus, son of the Conqueror.

Burke, in his "History of the Commoners," states that Robert de Heneage was witness in Lincolnshire to a grant of lands from Nicholas Basset to the monks of Brucra, either in the time of William Rufus or of King Stephen. John de Heneage was living in the time of Henry III. His son was Walter de Heneage. Walter's son was William de Heneage, whose son, John de Heneage, appears by deed to be possessed of the manor of Hainton in Lincolnshire in 1337; sold to John De La Ware, but repurchased in the twenty-first year of Richard II, by John Heneage, son of the foregoing. He married Alice, daughter of Walter Goddard of Swetesham,

Norfolk, and had William Heneage of Hainton, who married Grace Stamford. Their oldest son, William, married Margaret Cawood; John, his son and heir, married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of John Preston, of Sotheriston, in Lincolnshire, who died in 1477. Thomas, the oldest son, left only a daughter, and John, the second son, inherited the estate. He married Anne, daughter and sole heir of Edward Cope of Helmeden in Northamptonshire, and had John, George, and William, and two daughters, Mary and Katherine. Mary married (first) Thomas Andrew; (second) Sir Robert Lane. (See Andrew English pedigree VI.)

EMPSON

Arms—Argent, two bendlets engrailed sable.

The family name Empson, earlier Emson, according to Bardsley, is more generally derived from Emma's son, but sometimes from Emery's son. Johannes Emmeson, or Emson, is recorded in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, 1379 A. D.; Richard Emereson is recorded in 1491, and the same man, Richard Empson, in the Rolls of Parliament, in 1495, is Richard Emryson, in 1490.

Sir Richard Empson, of Towcester, County Northampton, was Councillor to King Henry VII, master and surveyor of his forfeits. He acquired lands in Old Thoun, Great Kimbell, Stone, Bishopstone, and Hartwell, in Buckinghamshire, about 1507. He was attainted of high treason, and executed August 18, 1510, under Henry VIII.

Bridges' "History of Northamptonshire," says he was the son of a sieve-maker. His daughter, Jane Empson, married John Pynchon, of Writtel, son of Nicholas and Agnes Pynchon. (See Pynchon English pedigree II.)

ORCHARD

Arms—Azure, a chevron argent between three pears or.

The family name Orchard signifies one who dwells at the orchard. John de la Orcharde is on record in the Hundred Rolls of Somersetshire, 1273 A. D., and Richard atte Orchard in Kirby's Quest, Somersetshire, 1327 A. D.

James le (for de?) Orchard, son of Baldwyn, and grandson of Richard, "suffered a fine to the use of Hemerick his son in the twenty-fifth year of Henry III" (1240). This Hemerick le Orchard had a son James Orchard, living in the third year of Edward I.

His son Thomas Orchard, had a son Thomas living in the thirty-sixth year of Edward III (1362), who married Alice (surname unknown). Their son, Robert Orchard, married Margaret, daughter of Robert Manningford. Their son, William Orchard, married the co-heir of Thomas Trevett; and William Orchard's daughter, Christian, married Walter Portman, Esq., who died in 1474. The above appears to be the only landed Orchard family known in England, and is still represented in Devonshire. The Orchard who married John, son of John and Jane (Empson) Pynchon, is probably a descendant of a younger son of an ancestor back of William. (See Pynchon English pedigree III.)

NJOU is the old name of a French territory, the political origin of which is traced to the ancient Gallic state of the Andes, on the line of which was organized, after the Conquest by Julius Cæsar, the Roman civitas of the Andecair. This was afterwards preserved as an administrative district under the Franks with the name first of Pagus, then of Comitatus, or countship of Anjou. It occupied the greater part of what is now Maine-et-Loire, and included other territory to the north, south, and east.

CALDICOT CASTLE

CALDICOT CASTLE.

Caldicot Castle, which occupies the most westerly site mentioned in the Domesday Book, was originally held by Sheriff Durand, and then by ten successive De Bohuns, Earls of Hereford and hereditary constables of England. It passed from them by Eleanor, co-heir of Earl Humphrey (see Bohun line) in marriage to Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, and was afterward annexed to the Duchy of Lancaster as royal property by Henry VIII. It was an important fortress in early days, standing near Bristol Channel and the port of Portskewit, where it guarded the entrance and exit of the Norman ships and of the vessels of the Angevin kings. Sir James D. Mackenzie, from whose "Castles of England: Their Story and Structure," the accompanying views are reproduced, states that "great care was lavished upon the building of this castle in the strength and finish of the masonry," which "is all of ashlar and of extraordinary fineness," and that the portcullis and bridge arrangements are "by far the most finished in the kingdom," the machicoulis being worked on corbels "sculptured with portraits, of a richness rarely met with in this country."

NEWPORT

NEWPORT CASTLE.

The remains of Newport Castle stand on the right bank of the River Usk, in Monmouthshire, its walls and towers rising directly out of the water. Williams states that this part of the country was subdued by Martin, Lord of Cemais, who caused the castle to be built at the northeast angle of the town on the west side of the river. Other authorities state that Robert Fitzhaman, Conqueror of Glamorgan, originally reared the edifice at the end of the eleventh century to defend the passage of the river at this point. The present edifice, however, was built by the Stafford family, who inherited the manor from the De Clares. It was a fine example of the perpendicular style of architecture adapted to a strictly military structure, and Parker states that the river front, which alone remains perfect, is a "beautiful composition." The remains of this fine old castle have been "sadly degraded," says Sir James D. Mackenzie, "by being occupied as a brewery." The three front towers were in existence at the beginning of the nineteenth century in nearly a perfect state, and the south tower was for a time used as a nail factory.

VI

IX

RALPH DE STAFFORD, second baron, served in the wars of Scotland; was made Knight of the Bath in 1324; Knight of the Garter in 1344; Seneschal of Aquitaine in 1345; Earl of Stafford in 1351. He married (first) Katherine, daughter of Sir John Hastang; (second) Margaret de Audley, only daughter and heiress of Hugh de Audley, Baron Audley. (See Royal Descent XXX and De Audley VI.) By right of his second wife he became Earl of Gloucester. For his military services in France and in Scotland, however, he was created, March 5, 1351, Earl of Stafford, and the barony of Audley is presumed to be merged in his barony of Stafford. He died August 31, 1372, and was succeeded by his only surviving son, Hugh, of whom further.

X

HUGH DE STAFFORD, third Baron and second Earl of Stafford, died in October, 1386. He married Philippa de Beauchamp, daughter of Thomas, Earl of Warwick. (See Royal Descent XXXI and Beauchamp V.)

 NEVILL

Nevill or Neville is the surname of a famous English noble house descended from Dolfin, son of Nchtred, who in 1131 received from the prior of Durham a grant of "Staindropshire," County Durham, a territory which remained in the hands of his descendants for more than four centuries and in which stood Raby Castle, their chief seat. His grandson Robert, son of Meldred, married the heiress of Geoffrey Neville (died 1193), who inherited from her mother Bulmer Lordship of Brancepeth near Durham, after which Brancepeth Castle became the seat of the house, but it adopted the Norman name of Neville. Branches of the family became earls of Warwick, Salisbury, Northumberland, Kent, Abergavenny, and Barons of Braybrooke, and one branch of the line became lords of Fauconburg. The Nevills were "mighty in the North Country."

ABERGAVENNY CASTLE.

This historic fortress, of which only picturesque ruins now survive, is said by Camden to have been founded by Hameline de Baladum (or Barham) soon after the Conquest (1066). Brian of Wallingford, surnamed Fitz-Count, nephew of Hameline, was his heir, but Brian's two sons were lepers and the greater part of the estate went to Milo, Earl of Hereford, who was succeeded by his brother Henry. After Henry was slain by the Welsh during an invasion upon his lands, Abergavenny (known also as Bergavenny) went to his sister and heir who married one of the Braoses of Bramber. From the Braoses, by marriage, it went to the Cantelupes, then to the Hastings family, from whom it went to Reginald Grey of Ruthin. William de Beauchamp received it from Grey and, having no male heirs, made it over to his brother Thomas Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick (see Beauchamp IV). William de Beauchamp, a later lord of Abergavenny, had a granddaughter who brought the estate to Edward Nevill, from which date the Nevills bore the title Barons Bergavenny, though they did not obtain the castle until later. It remained in the Nevill family for many generations.

The Beauchamps of Emley, Worcestershire, the greatest house of the name, were founded by the marriage of Walter de Beauchamp, a descendant of Henry de Beauchamp (who came to England with William the Conqueror), with the daughter of Urise d'Abetot, a Domesday baron, which brought him the shrievalty of Worcestershire, the office of a royal steward, and large estates. FLANDERS

Arms of Ancient Counts of Flanders—Or, a lion rampant sable, armed and langued gules.

Crest—Between a pair of wings or, the lion affrontée sejant.

Motto—Vlaandeeren den leeuw. (Flanders to the lion.)

The territorial name Flanders is derived from the Flemish Vlaandeeren, and was originally applied only to Bruges and its immediate neighborhood, but in the eighth and ninth centuries it was gradually extended to the whole of the coast region from Calais to the Scheldt. In the Middle Ages it was divided into two parts, one with Bruges as capital, the other with Ghent as capital.

The ancient territory of Flanders comprised not only the modern provinces known as East and West Flanders, but the southernmost portion of the Dutch Province of Zeeland, and a considerable district in Northwestern France. In the time of Cæsar it was inhabited by the Morini, Atrebates, and other Celtic tribes, but in the centuries that followed, the land was repeatedly overrun by German invaders, and finally became a part of the dominion of the Franks. On the break-up of the Carolingian Empire, the River Scheldt was by the treaty of Verdun (843) made the line of division between the Kingdom of East Francia (Austrasia) under the Emperor Lothaire, and the Kingdom of West Francia (Neustria) under Charles the Bald. In virtue of this compact Flanders was henceforth attached to the West Frankish monarchy (France). It thus acquired a position unique among the provinces of the territory known in later times as the Netherlands, all of which were included in that northern part of Austrasia assigned on the death of the Emperor Lothaire (855) to King Lothaire II, and from his name called Lotharingia or Lorraine.

I

BALDWIN I, Count of Flanders (858-879), the first ruler of Flanders of whom history has left any record, was known as Baldwin Bras-de-fer (Iron-arm). This man, a brave and daring warrior under Charles the Bald, fell in love with the King's daughter, Judith, the youthful widow of two English kings, married her, and fled with his bride to Lorraine. Charles, though at first very angry, was at last conciliated, and made his son-in-law margrave (Marchio Flandriæ) of Flanders, which he held as an hereditary fief. The Northmen were at this time continually devastating the coast lands, and Baldwin was entrusted with the possession of this outlying borderland of the West Frankish dominion in order to defend it against the invaders. He was the first of a line of strong rulers, who at some date early in the tenth century exchanged the title of margrave for that of count. He married Judith, daughter of Charles the Bald (see descent from Charlemagne V), and they were the parents of Baldwin II.

II

BALDWIN II, Count of Flanders, from his stronghold at Bruges maintained, as did his father, a vigorous defense of his lands against the incursions of the Northmen, and took an active part in the struggles in Lorraine between the Emperor Otto I and Hugh Capet. He married Aelf-thryth, daughter of Alfred the Great, and on his death, in 918, his possessions were divided between his two sons:

1. Arnulf the Elder, of whom further.
2. Adolphus.

III

ARNULF I, son of Baldwin II and Aelfthryth, inherited after the death of Adolphus, the whole of his father's possessions.

IV

BALDWIN III, son of Arnulf I, died in 962, when the countship reverted to his father for a short time and then passed to the son of Baldwin III.

V

ARNULF II, son of Baldwin III, held the countship from 965 to 988, when the title passed to his son, Baldwin IV.

VI

BALDWIN IV, son of Arnulf II, was Count of Flanders from 988 to 1036. He was called Barbatus, or the Bearded. He fought successfully both against the Capetian King of France and the Emperor, Henry II, from the latter of whom he received the Valenciennes in fief, the burgraveship of Ghent, the lands of Waes, and Zeeland. The Count of Flanders thus became a feudatory of the Empire as well as of the French crown. The French fiefs are known in Flemish as Crown Flanders (Kroon-Vlaandeeren), the German fiefs as Imperial Flanders (Rijks-Vlaandeeren).

VII

BALDWIN V (1036-1067), son of Baldwin IV, was known as Dèbonnaire. He was an active, enterprising man, and greatly extended his power by wars and alliances. He obtained from the Emperor Henry IV the territory between the Scheldt and the Dender as an imperial fief, and the margraviate of Antwerp. He married Adela, daughter of Robert of France.

VIII

BALDWIN VI (1067-1070), of Flanders, son of Baldwin V and Adela, was known as Baldwin of Mons; married Richilde, heiress of Regnier V of Hainault.

The "Survey" made in the time of the Domesday Book (1086 A. D.) records Robertus de Hardres, who held half a plow land in Liminge, but it is uncertain whether the advent of the family into England occurred before or after the Norman Conquest.

The family is one which from early times won for itself distinction. Burke in his "General Armory" gives four coats-of-arms for Oxenden, each differing from the others only very slightly.  PROVENCE

Arms of Ancient Counts of Provence—D'or au chev. d'azur acc. de trois bâtons écotés de gu.

Or, a chevron azure between three batons raguly gules.

The name Provence was applied to a province in the southeastern part of ancient France, and dates back to the first entrance of the Romans into Gaul in B. C. 125, when after the Roman Conquest the territory between the Alps, the sea, and the Rhone, with the Province of Narbourn on the right bank of the river, were formed into the "Provincia Romana." Later, when part of this section was added to other provinces, the name Provence remained with the territory between the Dauphiné, the Rhone and Languedoc, the Alps and the Mediterranean. It was attacked by the Visigoths at the beginning of the fifth century, conquered by the Saracens at the beginning of the eighth century, later came under Frankish rule, and at the time of the partition of Charlemagne's Empire (843), fell to the share of Lothair I, from whom it passed to Emperor Louis II, who was also King of Italy. At his death (875), Provence passed to Charles the Bald. From Charles the Bald it passed to his brother-in-law, Duke Boso. After the middle of the tenth century the countship of Province passed to William and Rouband (Rotbold), sons of Boso. A descendant of Rouband was Douce, who married Raimond Berenger III, son of Raimond Berenger II, of further mention.

TAILLEFER was the surname of a bard and warrior of the eleventh century who accompanied the Norman army to England in 1066, and obtained permission from William to strike the first blow at the battle of Hastings. He fought valiantly and was killed in the battle. Some of his valorous deeds are depicted on the Bayeux tapestry. The family were early Counts of Angoulême. (See Angoulême.)  AQUITAINE

Arms—D'or à l'aigle de sin.; à la bord. d'azur semée de fleurs-de-lis du champ.

Or, an eagle vert; a bordure azure semée of fleurs-de-lis of the field.

The name Aquitania is probably a form of Auscetani, which in turn is a lengthened form of Ausces and is thus cognate with the words Basque and Wasconia (Gascony). The extent of this ancient province of France has varied considerably. About the time of Julius Cæsar, Aquitania comprised that part of Gaul lying between the Pyrenees and the Garonne, but during the time of the Roman Emperor Augustus it included the whole of Gaul south and west of the Loire and the Allier. Parts of it were held by the Visigoths for a time, but the Frankish Clovis took possession in 507. In 781 Charlemagne gave Aquitaine (then referred to as a kingdom) to his young son Louis. When Louis became emperor, he gave Aquitaine to his son Pippin. A little before 845 the title, Duke of Aquitaine, was revived, and in 893 King Charles III ordered that Count Rainulf II, who then held Aquitaine, should be poisoned, after which the King bestowed the duchy upon William the Pious, Count of Auvergne, founder of the Abbey of Cluny. He was succeeded by his nephew, Count William II, in 918, and there followed a long line of dukes, among whom William IV fought against Hugh Capet, King of France; William VI added Gascony; and William IX became famous as a crusader and a troubadour.

William X, who died in 1137, had a daughter Eleanor, who married (first) Louis VII, King of France, from whom she was divorced. She then married, in 1152, Henry II, of England. (See Royal Pedigree XXIV.)

FERRERS

Arms—Sable, six horseshoes argent.

The great Norman-English feudal house of Ferrers was derived from Ferrières-St. Hilare, which was situated south of Bernay, in Normandy. The horseshoe early became the emblem of the family, and though the bearings of succeeding generations changed somewhat, in arrangement and tincture, the principal charge remained. The district of Gostenois in Normandy was noted for its iron mines. St. Elroy, Bishop of Noyon, was patron saint of the family. He was regarded as a special patron of iron workers, and has been emblematically represented as forging a horseshoe.

I

The earliest known ancestor of the family was Walkelin, who was slain in a feud in Normandy during the Conqueror's minority, leaving a son, Henry, of whom further.

II

HENRY, SEIGNEUR DE FERRIERES or FERRERS, son of Walkelin de Ferrers, was lord of the town or district of Gostenois in Normandy, and took part in the Conquest. At the time of the Domesday Survey he held lands in fourteen different counties, but the bulk of it was situated in Derbyshire and Leicestershire, especially in the former. He was himself one of the royal commissioners for the survey. He established his chief seat at Tutbury Castle in Staffordshire on the Derbyshire border and founded there a cluniac priory. He married Bertha, surname unknown.

He was one of the witnesses to the charter of King Stephen granted to the Abbey of Bath. He married Hawisia de Vitry, and they had children (see de Vitry):

1. Robert, of whom further.
2. William.

Two daughters.

IV

ROBERT DE FERRERS, son of Robert and Hawisia (de Vitry) de Ferrers, succeeded his father as Earl of Derby in 1139. He founded the Abbey of Derby and the priory of Bredon in 1141; founded the Abbey of Miravalle for Cistercian Monks in 1148; and died in 1162. He married Sibilla, daughter of William de Braose, of Brëmber, Knape, and Gower. (See de Braose IV.)

Children:

1. William, of whom further.
2. Walchelene.
3. Isolda.

V

WILLIAM DE FERRERS (at one time called Robert) held in 1165 seventy-nine knights' fees. He was a supporter of Prince Henry in the rebellion of 1172, when he fortified his castles of Tutbury and Duffield and plundered Nottingham, which was held for the King. The following year Prince Res of Wales, an ally of the Kings, besieged the Ferrers Castle at Tutbury. Ferrers retaliated by sacking and burning the castle at Nottingham. In 1189 he was deprived of his earldom by Richard I. He set out that

TUTBURY CASTLE.

At the extreme east of Staffordshire may be found the picturesque ruins of the old castle of Tutbury. The honour of Tutbury was granted to Henry de Ferrars, or Ferrers, a Norman baron (Ferrers II). He was created Earl of Derby, held large possessions, and his many descendants held the stronghold until the close of the reign of Henry III. Robert de Ferrers, ward of the King, married Mary, half sister of the King, but later joined the cause of the barons, and unable to pay the fine of £50,000 imposed on the disinherited barons, his lands were forfeited. The King then gave Tutbury and other lands of the Ferrers to his second son, Edmund Lancaster, and of that Duchy they are still part. The castle is later notable as having been the place of imprisonment of Mary, Queen of Scots, who spent one and one-half years of her nineteen years of imprisonment at this place.

Sir Roger was the Conqueror's standard bearer at the battle of Hastings, 1066, and from that day the Corbets have been a distinguished family of Shropshire. In 1250 the family acquired the estate of Moreton Turet and built Moreton Castle, the picturesque ruins of which still stand. The Corbets also long owned Sundorne Castle in Shropshire. He took part with the barons in the revolt against King John, for which the King seized his Castle of Caus, which was restored to him in the second year of the reign of Henry III (1218). He was one of the "Barons-Marchess" called by King Henry III to consult with the King at Oxford; was Sheriff for the counties of Salop and Stafford; attended King Henry III in his expedition into Wales; and received a commission in 1262, upon report of the death of Dewellin, to rendezvous at Shrewsbury. On the accession of William Rufus he received the inheritance of the Saxon Turchil de Warwick, who at the time of the Conquest had the reputation of Earl. (The bear and ragged staff which had been the device or ensign of Turchil's family, derived from Guy, Earl of Warwick, famed for his chivalrous feats related in the ancient Saxon chronicles, was assumed by the new Earl and has continued as the badge of the Earls of Warwick.) The arms are those recorded by Banks for Newburgh, Earls of Warwick. Henry de Burgh was memorable for his donations for pious foundations as well as for his military record; died in 1123. VIII

ALICE DE TONI, daughter of Ralph de Toni, was heir to her brother Robert. She married (first), Thomas Leybourne. She married (second) Guy de Beauchamp, Earl of Warren. (See Beauchamp III.) She married (third) William le Zouche, of Ashby.

Zouche of Ashby

Arms—Gules, ten bezants or.

THE name Zouche signifies a "stock." This ancient and noble house descended from the earls of Brittany. According to Burton, as recorded in his "History of Leicestershire," the family descended from Geoffrey, second son of Alan, viscount de Rohan, in Little Brittain, in France, by Constance, daughter and heiress of Conan the Great, Duke of Brittain, by Maud his wife, daughter of King Henry I.

I

GEOFFREY, second son of Alan, Viscount de Rohan, had a son, Alan, of whom further.

II

ALAN LE ZOUCHE had a son, Roger, of whom further.

III

ROGER ZOUCHE had sons, William, and Roger, of whom further.

IV

ROGER ZOUCHE, son of Roger, adhered to King John against the rebellious barons, and received from that King a grant of several manors and lordships. He was Sheriff of Devonshire in the thirteenth year of Henry III (1229), "so continued to the 15th of the same King." He had a son, Alan, of whom further.

V

ALAN ZOUCHE, son and heir of Roger, received in 1250 a grant of the custody of all the King's lands in Cheshire and Wales. He died in 1270. He married Elene, daughter and co-heir of Roger de Quinci, Earl of Winton. (See de Quincy IV.)

WILLIAM MARSHAL

WILLIAM MARSHALL.

Effigy of William Marshall from his tomb in Temple Church, London. (See Marshall I.)

GOODRICH CASTLE.

Founded in the early days when the Welsh hordes were sweeping the country, the commanding position of this fortress arrests attention. Its chief purpose was the protection of the ferry that lay beneath, crossing the Wye on the border of Monmouthshire, chief thoroughfare between England and the Marches of Wales. The possession of this castle to William Mareschal (Marshall) I was confirmed by King John in 1203. Upon his death his five sons succeeded, but all died without issue. His eldest daughter, next heir, brought Goodrich to Warren de Monchensi in marriage. The son of this marriage taking sides against the King in the Barons' War at Lewes, gained disfavor with Henry III and after his capture at Kenilworth his estates were forfeited and granted to William de Valence, the French half-brother of the King. William died in 1296, and was buried in Westminster Abbey, his son murdered in 1323 while attending Queen Isabella in France. Goodrich went to his niece Elizabeth Comyn and thence to her husband Baron Talbot, his great-grandson becoming first Earl of Shrewsbury. The Castle, still the possession of this family, was seized by the Yorkists in the War of the Roses, but later was recovered by the Earl of Shrewsbury in the possession of whose descendants it remained until the seventeenth century. At this period Gilbert, seventh Earl died (1616), and Goodrich was inherited by Elizabeth, wife of Henry Grey, Earl of Kent. A stronghold of the King in the Civil War, it was defended by Sir Henry Lingen against the forces of Parliament in 1646 until it could resist no longer and was surrendered when by order of Parliament it was left a wreck.

On the death of his brother he became Lord Marshal, and on the day of the coronation of King John he was invested with the sword of the Earldom of Striguil (Pembroke). He died in 1219 and was buried in the Temple Church in London. His five sons William, Richard, Gilbert, Walter, and Anselme, succeeded each other in his lands and honours which were then divided among his five daughters: Maud; Joane; Isabel, of whom further; Sibyl, who married William de Ferrers, Earl of Derby; and Eve, who married William de Braose, of Brecknoch.

The Mortimers of Wigmore, Earls of March and Ulster, were kin to many of the great houses to which the Dukes of Normandy belonged. Their chief seat in Normandy came to be St. Victor-en-Caux, where in 1074, by the last recorded act of Roger and his wife Hawise, the priory became an abbey. Their ancestor Hugh, who was Bishop of Coutances in 990, had at least three sons by a niece of Herfast the Dane, the eldest of these being Ralph, father of William of Warren, Earl of Surrey; and the second, Roger, of whom further.

ROGER DE MORTIMER, son of Ralph and Gladys de Mortimer, succeeded his father. He married a great co-heiress Maud, daughter of William de Braose, of Brecknock, by Eve, sister and co-heir of the Earl of Pembroke. Roger de Mortimer took active part with Henry III against the rebellious knights, and after the battle of Lewes, when the King and Prince Edward were captured, he is recorded to have contrived and effected the escape of the Prince. In the seventh year of Edward I (1279) he held a tournament at Kenilworth, where he sumptuously entertained for three days, one hundred knights, and as many ladies, "the like whereof had never been before in England." The Queen of Navarre sent him certain wooden bottles, under the pretence of wine, but in truth filled with gold, and for many years they were kept in the Abbey at Wigmore. (See de Braose V.)

LEWES CASTLE.

Lewes Castle is placed on the top of a steep hill, and its position is a most commanding one. On the east and west and north its view is a wide one, on the south its prospect extends over what is now meadow stretching toward Newhaven, what was then an arm of the sea, covering at the height of the tide an expanse of muddy waste.

An early Saxon Castle was to be found here, and on its side William de Warrene and his wife Gundred, daughter of the Conqueror, erected a Norman Castle (Warren I). It remained in the possession of this powerful family until their extinction in the fourteenth century, when Lewes became the property of the Fitz-Alans of Arundel. Isabel de Warrene, of the line, carried the earldom in marriage first to William de Blois and then to Hameline Plantagenet, brother of Henry II. The last earl died in the reign of Edward III. Here occurred the Battle of Lewes in the Barons' War, 1265. From the death of the last earl of Warren and Surrey in 1347 to the Reformation there is little to record, for when the possessions passed into the hands of Richard Fitz-Alan, it ceased to be occupied by its owners, and its history becomes that of many of the castles of feudal splendor, it fell into ruins and decay.

Warren-Warenne Arms—Chequy or and azure.

THE family name Warren or Warenne, of the first earls of Surrey, is claimed to be from a fortress, Varenne, in Normandy. The armorial bearings herein described are the earliest borne by this family, described in Banks' "Dormant and Extinct Baronage."

I

WILLIAM DE WARENNE was a kinsman of William the Conqueror, and aiding him at the battle of Hastings, was rewarded with the barony of Lewes in Sussex and large grants of land in other counties. He received, probably from William Rufus, son and successor of the Conqueror, the earldom of Surrey. He died June 24, 1088. He married Gundred, daughter of the Conqueror (or according to Stephens, sister of Gorbod, Earl of Chester), and had children:

1. William, of whom further.
2. Rainald.
- 3-4. Two daughters.

II

WILLIAM DE WARENNE, second Earl of Surrey, died May 10, 1138. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Hugh, Count of Vermandois (see Vermandois II) and had children:

1. William.
2. Reginald.
3. Ralph.
4. Adeline.
5. Gundred, of whom further.

III

GUNDRED DE WARREN, daughter of William and Elizabeth (de Vermandois) de Warenne, married Roger de Newburgh, second Earl of Warwick, who died A. D. 1154. (See Newburgh line II.)

VERMANDOIS

Arms—Chequy azure and gold, on a chief of the first three fleurs-de-lis of the second.

The surname or title de Vermandois originated from Vermand, a county named from its capital, in Picardy, now Department Aisne in North-eastern France, seat of the Veromandui of Roman times.

The records of the counts go back to Herbert, grandson of Bernard of Italy. From 1045 to 1083, the counts possessed also the Valois. In 1102, Raoul de Vermandois was the reigning count, probably son of Hugh de Vermandois.

I

HUGH, Count of Vermandois.

II

ELIZABETH, daughter of Hugh, Count of Vermandois, married William de Warenne, second Earl of Surrey. (See Warren II.)

HARCOURT

Arms—Gules two bars or.

Crest—On a ducal coronet or, a peacock close proper.

The family name Harcourt originated in the town and ancient chateau, now in ruins, of Harcourt near Brionne in Normandy. Ive de Harcourt is on record in England in the Pipe Roll of the eleventh year of Henry II (A. D. 1165).

I

The Harcourt family is descended from Bernard, chief counsellor and second in command to the famous Rollo, ancestor to the kings of England of the Norman line in his descent upon Normandy, A. D. 876. He obtained the lordships of Harcourt, Caileville and Beauficel, when Rollo, who was also a Dane, made himself master of that province. Bernard was likewise minister to Rollo's son and successor, William, styled Longa-Spatha, and guardian to his son Richard, Duke of Normandy, surnamed the Hardy, and regent of the Norman territories during his minority. Bernard married a de Sprote, a lady of the royal family of Burgundy. The only son and heir was Torf, of whom further.

II

TORF, surnamed the Rich, son of Bernard and ——— (de Sprote), married Ertemberga, daughter of Launcelot de Briquebec, a noble of Danish extraction, and they had three sons, namely:

1. Touroude, or Turulph, ancestor of the Beaumonts.
2. Turchetil, of whom further.
3. William de Torville.

III

TURCHETIL, son of Torf and Ertemberga (de Briquebec) was lord of Turqueville, etc., and joint guardian with his elder brother Touroude, of William, Duke of Normandy. He married Adeline de Montfort, sister of Toustani, lord of Montfort-sur-Risle.

Children:

1. Anchetil, of whom further.
2. Walter de Turqueville.
3. Lesselnie, wife of William, Earl of Eu.

IV

ANCHETIL DE HARCOURT, son of Turchetil and Adeline (de Montfort), was the first who took the name of Harcourt. He married Eva, Lady de Boessey la Chastel, and had seven sons and one daughter.

V

ROBERT DE HARCOURT, second son of Anchetil and Eva (de Boessey la Chastel) de Harcourt, surnamed the Strong, was the ancestor of the present Earl Harcourt, and built the castle of Harcourt; and with his elder brother, Errand, attended William, Duke of Normandy, in his expedition to England, A. D. 1066. He married Colede D'Argouges.

VI

WILLIAM DE HARCOURT, eldest of the seven sons of Robert and Colede (D'Argouges) de Harcourt, took part with Henry I in the battle near Bourgtouroude, A. D. 1123, and for his services was rewarded with large possessions in England. He married Hue D'Ambrose, by whom he had:

1. Robert.
2. Ivo, of whom further.
3. Simon.
4. Peretta.
5. Beatrix.

VII

IVO DE HARCOÛRT, second son of William and Hue (D'Ambrose) de Harcourt, inherited all his father's possessions in England, and by his wife was father of three children:

1. Robert, of whom further.
2. John.
3. Lucy.

VIII

ROBERT (Banks says John, his brother) DE HARCOURT, son of Ivo de Harcourt, was Sheriff of Warwick and Leicester in the years 1199, 1201, and 1202, in which last year he died. He married Isabel, only child and heir of Richard de Camville, and in right of his wife was seated in Stanton in Oxfordshire, since that time called Stanton-Harcourt. They had four sons, and one daughter, Alice, of whom further, successively the wife of John de Limesi and Waleran de Newburgh, fourth Earl of Warwick.

IX

ALICE DE HARCOURT, daughter of Robert (John his brother, according to Banks) married (first) John de Limesi; (second) Waleran de Newburgh, son of Roger de Newburgh. (See Newburgh III.)

HAMESLAPE—HAMESLEPE

Arms—Argent, two bars gules, over all a crosslet-fitchée azure.

Crest—A leopard sejant proper.

The family name Hameslape, earlier Hamslape, originated from a parish on the border of Buckinghamshire, extending into Northamptonshire, later Hamslape. William de Hamslape is on record in the Hundred Rolls of Bucks, 1273 A. D.

Michael de Hameslepe is addressed by King Henry I in a charter made at Rockingham about the year 1101 in favor of the See of Lincoln. He is also mentioned as once lord of the fief which King Henry I bestowed on William Malduit (Mauduit); but Banks says, "Mauduit, marrying Maude, daughter of Michael de Hameslepe, acquired with her the barony of Hamslape in the county of Buckingham," she being the sole daughter and heir. There seems to be no earlier history of this family than the mention in the charter of 1101 A. D. Mauduit was son of the first William Mauduit of the Domesday Survey, 1086 A. D., but the second William appears in a charter of Henry I, without the title of chamberlain, which Nicholas gives to his brother Robert who died the same year as King Henry I (1135 A. D.). (See Mauduit II.)

DE BRAOSE

Arms—Azure, semée of cross crosslets gules, a lion rampant or, armed and langued of the second.

The family name De Braose or Braose originated from the Castle of Braose, now Brieuse, two leagues from Falaise in Normandy. William de Braose is on record in the Testa de Neville (Henry III-Edward I); William de Breuse in the Hundred Rolls of Sussex; and Bernard de Brus in the Hundred Rolls of Huntingdonshire, A. D. 1273.

I

WILLIAM DE BRAOSE was a Norman baron, and if we may judge from the large grants of land that he received from the Conqueror after the Conquest must have been one of his most favored companions, for at the time of the Domesday Survey (A. D. 1086) he had ewenty-eight manors in Sussex, thirty-five in Surrey, forty-seven in Hampshire, sixty-one in Berkshire, seventy-two in Wiltshire, and eighty-two in Dorsetshire. He made Bramber Castle in Sussex his headquarters. In Normandy he was lord of the Honor of Braose Castle in the Department of Calvados. He is mentioned last in a charter made between 1086 and 1089, and probably died soon after. He married Agnes, daughter of Waleran de St. Clare. (See St. Clare II.) They had a son, Philip, of whom further.

II

He is the Hugh de la Port who, according to Atkyns' "History of Gloucester," gave land to the Church of St. Peter at Gloucester in 1096. D. 1156; and Ralph de Caineto came into England with William the Conqueror; but none of the family were peers before Sir Robert de Cheyney, knighted in 1362. He was son of William de Cheyney, who obtained Shurland in Kent by marriage to Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir Robert de Shurland, of Shurland. An inquisition post-mortem, taken July 6, in the twenty-four year of Edward I (1297) shows that Alexander de Cheyney held the Manor of Titeberste of the Abbott and Convent of Westminster, by twenty shillings per annum; and that William de Cheyney was his son and heir, and of the age of twenty-two years. The frequent recurrence of the name William in the known line, and the location Kent makes it probable that William de Cheney, who married Margaret, daughter of Robert Fitz-Walter, was of this family. (See Fitz-Walter VI.)

VII

JOHN LANGSTON, son of William Langton, married a daughter of William Braytofte.

VIII

JOHN LANGTON, son of John and ——— (Braytofte) Langton, married a daughter of Sir John Fitz-Simon, older brother of Sir Ralph Fitz-Simon, both being sons of Sir Simon Fitz-Adam, of Hatfield, who married in the twenty-second year of Henry III (1237) the heiress of D'Avillers, of Bradwell, Suffolk. (See Fitz-Simon XIV.)

 VALLETORT

Arms—Barry of six argent and gules within a border sable bezantée.

The family name Valletort, or Valletourt, apparently originated from Valletot, now a commune in the Canton Routot, Arrondissement Pont Audemer, department of Eure in Normandy.

In the reign of William Rufus, son and immediate successor (1087-1100) of William the Conqueror, is mention of Reginald de Valletort. Banks names a son Roger, Baron of Huberton, who in the thirty-third year of Henry II (A. D. 1186) gave one hundred marks for livery of the honor of Trematon in Cornwall, where he had a strong castle; and in the fifth of John (A. D. 1204) answered for fifty-nine knights' fees of the honor of Moreton, Shropshire. Banks also states that Isabel, daughter of Reginald, and sister of Roger Valletort, married Thomas Corbet, one of the "barons Marches" against the Welsh (Marches or frontiers). (See Corbet VI.)

 DE VITRY

Arms—Gules, a lion argent crowned or.

The surname De Vitry (De Vitré) originates from the barony of Vitré in Brittany, France. Vitré is an ancient barony of Brittany, an appanage in the tenth century of a younger branch of the counts of Reimes, lying about thirty-five kilometres east of Reimes. Robert de Vitré married Bertha de Craon, who founded in 1064 the ancient priory of the Abbey de Marmoutiers. A branch of this family was seated in Lacock Parish in Wiltshire, but references to it in English history are very rare.

Hawisia de Vitry married Robert de Ferrers, son of Henry and Bertha de Ferrers. (See Ferrers III.)

PEVEREL

Arms—Quarterly, gules and vaire or and azure a lion rampant argent.

The family name Peverel in the Domesday Book is continually spelled Piperellus. This indicates that it is a diminutive of the Old French Peivre, Old English Pevear, English Pepper. Richard Peverel is on the Hundred Rolls of Huntingdonshire, A. D. 1273.

Ranulph Peverel at the Domesday Survey, A. D. 1086, held sixty-nine lordships in several counties. He married Maud, daughter of the Saxon noble Ingelric. But Maud already had a son William (by William the Conqueror) who was called William Peverel, of Nottingham, Lord of Hingham (Ferrars).

III

WILLIAM PEVEREL forfeited his estate to Henry II. He married Avice de Lancaster.

IV

MARGARET PEVEREL, daughter and heiress of William Peverel, married William de Ferrers, son of Robert and Sibilla (de Braose) Ferrers. (See Ferrers V.)

II

CONAN III, called the Great, began to rule Brittany in 1112, and died September 17, 1148. He married, and had a daughter Constance.

III

CONSTANCE, daughter of Conan the Great, married Alan, Viscount of Rohan. (See Rohan I.)

SEPTVANE—SEPTVANS

Arms—Azure, three winnowing baskets (“fannes”) or.

Crest—A dolphin embowed proper.

The family name Septvane or Septvans (with many variations, and later, alias Harfleet), is ascribed by Lower, “Patronymica Britannica,” to Septvents (Seven-winds) Parish in Arrondissement Bayeux, Department Calvados, Normandy.

I

ROBERT DE SEPTVANS is probably the earliest bearer of the name in England, as the name does not appear in Domesday Book. He married Emma, co-heir of William Fitz-Helte, who died a little before 1180. She is called of Aldington, which estate descends in the family, and where it would appear they were first seated in England. Robert, her husband, was dead in 1180. She was dead in 1187.

II

ROBERT DE SEPTVANS, son of Robert and Emma (Fitz-Helte) Septvans, born (probably) at Aldington, in 1173, died in 1216. He married, probably, Isilia, who appears as benefactress to St. John’s Abbey, Colchester, Robert possessing property in Essex.

III

ROBERT DE SEPTVANS, of Aldington, son of Robert de Septvans, died A. D. 1249, seized of Aldington, Whelmstone and Milton, and buried at Lieland. He left a widow Matilda, living in 1253.

IV

ROBERT DE SEPTVANS, son of Robert de Septvans, was aged about forty at the time of the inquisition post-mortem of his father’s estate, and he died in 1253, leaving a wife Isabella, a son, Robert, of whom further, and a daughter, Joan, who married John, Lord Cobham.

V

SIR ROBERT DE SEPTVANS, son of Robert and Isabella de Septvans, was born in 1250, died in 1306, and was buried at Chartham. He was knight of the shire in Parliament, 1290 and 1302, and bore arms. He married Johanna, widow of Richard de Wallies, who died in 1294. Philipot says he married an Aldon, most probably the daughter of Elias de Aldon, and sister of Sir Thomas de Aldon, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Geoffrey de Say, but whether before or after the marriage to Johanna, the records do not show. He was married before 1281.

VI

SIR WILLIAM DE SEPTVANS, son of Sir Robert de Septvans, was born in 1281, and died in 1323. He was of Milton, and was Sheriff of Kent, 1321-22. He married, before his father's death, in 1306, Elizabeth Pimpe, of Pimpe's Court, County Kent.

Children, born at Milton, County Kent:

1. William, born in 1301, died in 1351; married Elizabeth Boteler; had son William, and an only daughter.
2. John, of whom further.
3. Simon, of Symkin.
4. Robert, priest of St. Peter's in Sandwich, Kent.

VII

JOHN DE SEPTVANS, second son of William and Elizabeth (Pimpe) de Septvans, married a daughter of Roger Manston, of Manston Court, Isle of Thanet, and had John, of whom further; and Joan.

JOHN DE SEPTVANE (or SEPTVANS), son of John and ——— (Manston) de Septvans, possessed St. Lawrence and Sittingbourne in Kent. He married Constance St. Nicholas, and they had John and Thomas, who died without issue. Constance, a daughter, became abbess of Minster in Sheppey. (See St. Nicholas line I.)

IX

SUSAN DE SEPTVANE, second daughter of John and Constance (St. Nicholas) de Septvane, married Sir Henry Hardres, son of Sir Robert and Jane (Boughton) Hardres. (See Hardres V.)

War Cry—St. Maurice.

The House of Savoy is one of the most ancient of the reigning houses of Europe. The historic truth is that in the second realm of Burgundy and afterward in that of Arles reunited to the Holy Roman Empire, we find many powerful vassals by the name of Humbert, in the possession of Savoy, etc.

I

One of these families is that of Humbert aux Blanches Mains (Humbert of the White Hands), named in almost all the charters of Rodolph III and of Conrad II, and constable of the Emperor Conrad. His original fief seems to have been la Maurienne. He received the investiture of Chablais and of St. Maurice and then, new possessions in the Tarentaise and in the vale of Aosta. Thus was formed the little sub-Alpine State, half French and half Italian. Humbert seems to have reigned from 1027 to about 1051, leaving the title of Count de Maurienne and of Marquis of Italy, which passed to his successors. Amadeus I may have reigned 1048-51.

II

ODO, the youngest son of Humbert, reigned from 1051 to 1060. He married, in 1034, Adelaide, heiress of the Marquis of Turin, and widow of Henri de Montferrat, who inherited in 1035, Turin, Aste and Albergia, whence the title of Marquis of Italy. He had two sons: Pierre, who died childless; and Amadeus.

III

AMADEUS, son of Odo and Adelaide, of Montferrat, next was Count of Maurienne and Marquis of Italy, period 1060-1072.

IV

HUMBERT II, son of Amadeus, was Count of Maurienne and Marquis of Italy, 1072-1108. His daughter Adelaide was the mother of Louis VII, King of France. (See House of Capet VIII.)

V

AMADEUS II, son of Humbert II, married and ruled 1108-1148.

VI

HUMBERT III, son of Amadeus II, ruled from 1148 to 1188. He married (second) Germaine of Zähringen; and (third) Beatrix, of Vienne.

VII

THOMAS, son of Humbert III and Beatrix of Vienne, was Count of Savoy, 1188-1233. He had six children, of whom Amadeus III succeeded, and ruled 1233-1253; Thomas II, who died 1259, ancestor of the reigning line of Kings of Italy; Beatrix, of whom further; Peter, ruled 1263-68, but died without male issue; Philip, Archbishop of Lyons, from 1268-1285, died without issue; and Boniface, Archbishop of Canterbury, died in 1270.

VIII

BEATRIX, daughter of Thomas, Count of Savoy, married Raymond Berenger IV, 1209-1245, of Provence. (See Provence VI.)

MARGARET, daughter of Raymond Berenger IV and Beatrix, was the wife of St. Louis IX, of France, and the mother of Philip III, King of France, 1270-1285.

ELEANOR, daughter of Raymond Berenger IV and Beatrix, was the wife of Henry III, of England, 1216-1272, and the mother of Edward I, one of the most powerful kings of England, 1272-1307. (See Edward III of England VI.)

All early history of the Celtic Kings of Scotland is obscure. By the principle of tanistry brothers as nearer in degree of kinship invariably succeeded before the sons of the last chief. Less obscurity obtains since the union of the Picts and Scots under a King of Scottish race, A. D. 850.

I

KENNETH I (called MacAlpin) reigned from 844 to 859, succeeded by his brother Donald, 859 to 863.

II

CONSTANTINE I, son of Kenneth I, reigned from 863 until 877, when he fell in battle with the Danes, and was succeeded by his brother Aedh, 877-878.

III

EOCHA, son of Run, being of Strathclyde, by the daughter of Kenneth I, reigned from 878 to 880 in association with Ciric or Grig, son of Dungail. They were succeeded by Donald II, son of Constantine I, who reigned from 889 to 900, when he was succeeded by Constantine II, son of Aedh, who reigned from 900 to 942.

IV

MALCOLM I, son of Donald II, reigned from 942 to 954, when he was succeeded by his cousin Indulph, who reigned from 954 to 962, son of Constantine II.

V

DUBH, son of Malcolm I, reigned from 962 to 967, followed by Cuilean, son of Indulph, 967 to 972, and he by Kenneth II, son of Malcolm I, reigning to 995.

VI

CONSTANTINE III, son of Cuilean, reigned from 995 to 997, and was succeeded by Kenneth III, son of Dubh, reigning from 997 to 1005, and he by Malcolm II, son of Kenneth II, 1005 to 1034; who had three daughters, Bethoc, Donada, and another daughter who married Sigurd, Earl of Orkney.

VII

BETHOC, daughter of Malcolm II, married Crinan, lay abbot of Dunkeld; and Donada, married Finlaec, Mormaer of Moray.

VIII

DUNCAN I, son of Crinan and his wife Bethoc, succeeded his grandfather, and reigned 1034-1040, when he was killed, August 14, 1040, by his cousin Macbeth, son of Finlaec and Donada. Macbeth, whose story is the basis of Shakespeare's famous play "Macbeth," reigned from 1040 to 1057. He married Gruach, widow of Gillacomgan, and daughter of Bode, son of Kenneth III.

IX

LULACH, son of Gillacomgan and Gruach, was made King by Macbeth's party, but after reigning seven months was slain at Essie in Strathbogie, March 17, 1057-58; and Malcolm III, known as Ceanmor, or Great Head, oldest son of the murdered Duncan I, reigned from March 17, 1057-58, to November 13, 1093, when he was killed, and his brother Donald Bane ruled from November 13, 1093, to May, 1094. Malcolm Ceanmor married (first), about 1059, Ingibjorg, daughter or widow of Thorfinn, Earl of Orkney, and had sons Duncan II, Malcolm, and Donald. He married (second), in 1068-69, Margaret, daughter of Edward Atheling and sister of Edgar Atheling, of the line of Saxon Kings of England, who fled to Scotland. They had six sons and two daughters. Edith Matilda married Henry I of England. (See Royal Pedigree XXI.)

He married Dervorguil, daughter and co-heir of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and constable of Scotland. ANCIENT EARLS OF GALLOWAY

Arms—Azure, a lion rampant argent, crowned or.

Galloway in the earliest period of recorded history, comprehended the district of Carrick, the southern portion of Ayrshire. The name is now chiefly applied to the two Scottish counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown.

I

FERGUS, usually styled "de Galweia" or "of Galloway," is the first Lord of Galloway on record; who appears as a witness to a charter by King David I, granting land in Perdryc to the church of Glasgow, July 7, 1136, and in other writs up to 1147. The abbeys founded by Fergus alone or jointly with King David, were Dundrennan and Tongland in County Kirkcudbright, and Souleseat, County Wigtown. He became a monk in the new abbey of Holyrood, in old age, and died there in 1161. He married a relative of King Henry I and had Uchtred, Gilbert, and a daughter Affrica, who married Olave, King of Man.

II

UCHTRED, son of Fergus, shared the rule of Galloway with his brother Gilbert; and appears with his father in the charter of Perdryc, 1136. In 1174 he and his brother expelled the officers of the King of Scotland, and seized the royal castles. But the brothers quarreled, and Gilbert sent his son, Malcolm, with a party of armed men, who attacked the house of Uchtred in Loch Fergus on September 22, 1174, and put Uchtred to death. He married Gunhild, daughter of Waldera, Lord of Allendale, and brother of Gospatric, second Earl of Dunbar. They had Lochlan, who died between 1164 and 1166; Roland, of whom further, a son killed on September 30, 1185, in a conflict with Gillicolm, a marauder, in which both were mortally wounded; and Fergus, named in a charter, 1203-1214, as brother of Roland.

III

ROLAND, son of Uchtred, appears in a charter of Annandale, granted by King William the Lion about 1166, as son of Uchtred. King William assigned that part of ancient Galloway called Carrick to Roland's cousin Duncan, son of Gilbert. He is named as Justiciar and also a constable between 1189 and 1198, and died December 19, 1200, in Northamptonshire, England, where his wife had property. He married Elena (called also Eva and Hellaria), daughter of Richard, and sister of William de Morville, and heiress of both; and through her he acquired, at William's death in 1196, the extensive estates of the Morvilles, and the office of Constable of Scotland, for all of which he paid to the exchequer a relief duty of seven hundred marks of silver. She died June 11, 1217. They had Alan, of whom further; Thomas, who married Isabella, Countess of Atholl, and became Earl of Atholl in her right; a son mentioned in 1186 with his two brothers as hostages to Henry II of England; and a daughter Ada, married, 1233, Walter Bisset of Aboyne.

IV

ALAN, son of Roland, as he is constantly styled, succeeded his father as constable, and as Lord of Galloway, and other large domains in Scotland and England. In July, 1212, he was asked by King John of England for his aid with a thousand men of Galloway in invasion of Ireland, where the King granted to him in 1213 a large number of fiefs. He died in 1234 and was buried in the Abbey of Dundreman. He married (first) a lady said to be the daughter of Reginald, Lord of the Isles; married (second), in 1209, Margaret, eldest daughter of David, Earl of Huntingdon. He married (third), in 1228, a daughter of Hugh de Lacy, by whom no issue.

Children, by first marriage:

1. A daughter, a hostage in England, died about June 13, 1213.
2. Elena, married Roger de Quincy, in 1235, Earl of Winchester.

By second marriage:

3. Thomas, mentioned in a plea in 1279, by Duorgilla and others, died without issue.
4. Christina, married 1236, William de Forz or Fortibus, afterward Earl of Albemarle. She died without issue.
5. Devorgilla, of whom further.

V

DEVORGILLA, daughter of Alan, Lord of Galloway, and Margaret, daughter of David, Earl of Huntingdon. She married, in 1233, John de Baliol, of Barnard Castle, who died in 1269. She endowed Baliol College, Oxford, and built a bridge over the Nith at Dumfries; and founded, on April 10, 1273, the abbey called Sweetheart, or New Abbey, in Galloway. She died, January 28, 1289-90, and was buried with the heart of her husband at her New Abbey. (See Second Baliol Line V.)

Arms—Argent, two bars gemelles gules, on a chief sable a bar nebulée of the first.

Pimpe as a surname originated from an ancient manorial estate in County Kent, called Pimpa in the Domesday Book, A. D. 1086. The family line in the reign of Henry VIII ended in two heiresses, who married into the families of Rainsford and Scott.

WILLIAM DE PIMPE paid aid to knighting Edward the Black Prince, in 1346. Elizabeth de Pimpe is called of Pimpe's Court, but this is antedating, for she is probably the aunt of William de Pimpe, whose son Reginald acquired Loose, later called Pimpe's Court, by right of his wife, the sister of John Fremingham, who died without issue in 1410, whereas she married before 1306, Sir William de Septvans, who died in 1325. (See Septvans VI.)

 FLINTON

Arms—Argent, a cross lozengy gules.

Originally the surname Flinton designated a native of Flinton Manor or Parish in the East Riding of Yorkshire, Holderness division (which is returned in the Domesday Survey, 1086), where the family de Flinton later held lands.

I

HERBERT DE FLINTON, of Flinton, A. D. 1315, with the abbot of Thornton, was a co-proprietor of Humbleton lordship or manor. He married a daughter of Walter de la Symde, and had a son, Richard de Flinton, who was sheriff of Hull in 1451. One daughter married Walter Grimston, of Grimston (see Grimston VI.) Gerard (or Geoffrey) Flinton married the widow of William Grimston, and acquired the Garton estate.

II

MARGARET DE FLINTON, daughter and co-heir of Herbert de Flinton, married John, son of Sir John and Isabel (de Arches) de Skipwith. (See Skipwith VIII.)

The surname Grimston originated in Grimston Parish in Yorkshire. Godfrey de Grimeston is in the Hundred Rolls of County Oxford, 1273. Johannes and Thomas de Grymsten are in the Poll Tax of Yorkshire, A. D. 1379.

I

SYLVESTER DE GRIMSTON, of Grimston, in Yorkshire, attended William the Conqueror to England as standard-bearer, and fought valiantly at the battle of Hastings. In 1067 he was appointed the Conqueror's Chamberlain and did homage for Grimston and other lands which he held of Lord Roos in Holderness, Yorkshire.

II

DANIEL DE GRIMSTON, son of Sylvester de Grimston, succeeded his father, and married the daughter of Sir Adam Sprinuall.

III

SIR THOMAS GRIMSTON, son of Daniel de Grimston, married the daughter of Sir John Boswell, of Aldersen.

IV

JOHN GRIMSTON, son of Sir Thomas and ——— (Boswell) Grimston, married the daughter of Sir John Goodmaghan.

V

SIR WILLIAM GRIMSTON, son of Sir Thomas Grimston, was living in 1231. He married the daughter and heiress of Sir John Colholme, of Colholme, and had two sons: Sir Roger, of whom further; and Alexander.

VI

SIR ROGER GRIMSTON, son of Sir William and ——— (Colholme) Grimston, was under sheriff of County Kent to Hubert de Burgo, from 1223 to 1228. He married the daughter of Fulk, Constable of Fulmark, and had two sons: Walter, of whom further; and Gervaise.

VII

WALTER GRIMSTON, son of Sir Roger and ——— (Constable) Grimston, married the daughter and co-heir of Herbert Flinton, of Flinton, in Holderness, County York (see Flinton I), and had three sons: William, John, and Robert. William was the ancestor of the Grimstons of Norfolk, and Essex, including Sir Harbottle Grimston, of Bradfield, County Essex, and made a baronet, November 25, 1612, which honor was given to Sir Capel

Luckyn, who married Mary, sister of the third baronet Samuel Grimston, whose son died October, 1700. Sir Samuel adopted as his heir, their grandson William, who adopted the name Grimston, and under it was made first Viscount Grimston. In 1710, 1713, 1714 and 1727 he was member of Parliament for St. Albans, and April 29, 1719, created a peer of Ireland. His son, James, was second viscount, and married Mary Bucknall; his son, Sir James, adopting the name Bucknall was third viscount, and was created first Lord Verulam, Baron Verulam in England, July 9, 1790. (See Flinton I.)

Arches

Arms—Gules, three arches argent, two and one, masoned sable.

OTH the name and family Arches originated from residence in Arques, a town in the Department Pas de Calais, in Normandy, France. It had a strong castle, now one of the finest feudal ruins in Normandy.

I

GOZELIN, Vicomte d'Arques, is the earliest on record.

II

GODFREY (or GEOFFREY) FITZ-GOZELIN, or JOCELINE, is considered to be an elder son of Gozelin, who had also a daughter Beatrix, who married Geoffrey de Bolbec.

III

WILLIAM DE ARCIS, son of Godfrey Fitz-Gozelin d'Arques, married Beatrix, daughter of Geoffrey and Beatrix (d'Arques) de Bolbec, and is recorded in Domesday Book as holding one suling of land in Fleet, and also in another entry as holding Folkestone in Kent, and especially three houses in Dover; and in the lifetime of the Conqueror claimed certain lands which had belonged to Gozelin, Vicomte d'Arques, as his grandson. He left by his widow Beatrix, two daughters: Matilda, who married William the Chamberlain de Tancarville, who inherited the Norman possessions of her father; and Emma, the heiress of Folkestone, who married (first) Nigel de Muneville or Monville, in conjunction with whom she founded the Priory of Folkestone in 1095. She married (second) Manasses, Count de Guisnes (sometimes called Robert).

III

SIR ROBERT DE ARCHES is a descendant of Gozelin, mentioned in the Monasticon Anglicanum, though his parentage is not given.

IV

ISABEL DE ARCHES, daughter and heiress of Sir Robert de Arches, of Wranby, Yorkshire, married Sir John de Skipwith, thus bringing to him the Wranby estate. (See Skipwith VII.)

CONSTABLE

Arms—Barry of six, or and azure.

Occupational in derivation, the family name Constable originated from a holder of the office of constable. In the following armorial family, it was assumed from the office of Constable of Chester, one of the high dignities constituted by Hugh Lupus, and held by this family soon after the Norman Conquest.

I

IVON (or IHON) VESCY, Lord of Alnwick, married Joan, daughter and heir of Sir William Tyson.

 ST. NICHOLAS

Arms—Ermine, a chief quarterly or and gules.

As early as the reign of Henry III (1216-1272) the family St. Nicholas appear to have been settled in Essex, but afterwards are found seated at St. Nicholas Court in the Isle of Thanet. A Lawrence St. Nicholas in 1346 paid aid for making the Black Prince a knight, as holder of one quarter of a knight's fee at Selgrove. In 1345 the writ of Edward III was issued to Peter Hayward, Thomas de St. Nicholas, and William de Manston, in custody of the ports of Thanet. This Thomas was apparently dead in 1350, for Thomas, son of Thomas St. Nicholas, was next heir in that year, of Sir John Gifford, and was at that time twelve years old. He was afterwards knighted, and died in 1375, naming in his will, his widow, Elizabeth, son Lawrence, and daughters, Elizabeth and Agnes. But the evidence indicates that he had an older son John, whose sons bequeathed estates which they could only have derived from the heir of Sir Thomas. Sir Thomas had a brother, Sir Roger, of St. Nicholas Court, with whom Nicholas begins the pedigree. Elizabeth, the widow of Sir Thomas, was evidently the daughter and heir of Sir John Goshall by his wife Elizabeth, daughter of Sir John Grove; as this last Elizabeth, Lady of Goshall, is recorded in numerous acquittances for different sums from various persons farming the manor of Elmes in Ash, which we find in possession of the St. Nicholas family, in the pedigree of Sir Roger; whose great grandson, John, is called "John St. Nicholas of Ash in Kent."

CONSTANCE ST. NICHOLAS is evidently of the St. Nicholas family of Ash. Her father is "of Thanet," but his name is not given. She married John de Septvans, who was lord of the manor of Upper Hall in Ash, by right of his wife. Their son, John, founded the Chantry of the Upper Hall in St. Nicholas Church in Ash. (See Septvane VIII.)

DOUGLAS

Arms—Argent, a man's heart gules, on a chief azure three stars of the first.

The surname Douglas is derived from Douglas Water in Lanarkshire; Gaelic dubh glaise, "black stream," and the lands bordering it. "Aqua de Duglas" first occurs in a charter granted before A. D. 1160.

I

WILLIAM DE DUFGLAS first appears in authentic records as a witness to a charter by Jocelyn, Bishop of Glasgow, 1175 to 1199, to the monks of Kelso; though Douglas' Peerage claims that he was son of Theobald the Fleming. At that time he appears to have been the laird of the Douglas lands; and to have married the sister of Sir Freskin de Kersdale in Moray. The Douglas arms have the same three stars (mulletts) set in the same way as in the Murray arms. William Duglas does not appear on record after 1214, but his son Archibald is referred to in a charter of 1198 as son of William Duglas. Douglas' Peerage gives him sons Archenbald, Bricius, Alexander, Henry, Hugo, and Friskinus de Duglas, and a daughter Margaret, who married Hervey Keith.

II

ARCHENBALD DE DUGLAS, oldest son of William and ——— (de Kersdale) Duglas, witnessed several charters, especially a confirmation by King Alexander II of a charter of David de Lindsay to the monastery of Newbottle in 1220; and a charter of the Earldom of Lennox to Earl Maldun in 1238. He died before July 18, 1240, having married Margaret, daughter and co-heir of Sir John de Crawford of Crawford; and left two sons, William, and Andrew, the latter receiving Herdmanston and Livingston. (See Crawford IV.)

III

SIR WILLIAM DE DUGLAS, surnamed "Longleg," son of Archenbald and Margaret (de Crawford) de Duglas, was witness to several charters from 1240 to 1273, and is said to have died 1276. He married, says Home of Godscroft, Martha, daughter of Alexander Bruce, Earl of Carrich, and had Hugh, who succeeded his father in 1276, but died without issue in 1288; and William.

IV

WILLIAM DE DUGLAS, called "the Hardy," son of Sir William and Martha de Duglas, succeeded his brother in 1288, and swore fealty to Edward I of England, July 5, 1291; but held the castle of Berwick against Edward I in 1296, and joined Sir William Wallace in 1297, and was sent to England where he died in the castle of York in 1302. He married first, a daughter of William de Keith, and (second) Eleanor, widow of William Ferrers, of Groby. By his first marriage he had sons James, Hugh and Archibald. He was the ancestor of the Earls of Douglas.

V

JAMES DE DOUGLAS, son of William and ——— (de Keth) Douglas, is justly celebrated as the "Good Sir James," one of the chief associates of Robert Bruce in his attempt to restore the liberties of Scotland. He took Douglas castle, March 19, 1306-07, and Roxburgh castle, March 7, 1312-13, and at the decisive battle of Bannockburn, June 23, 1314, he commanded the centre of the Scottish army. He accompanied King Robert in invading England in 1322, and Randolph in another invasion, June, 1327. King Robert on his deathbed in 1329, requested Sir James to carry his heart to Jerusalem and to deposit it in the sepulchre of our Lord. Douglas sailed with it from Scotland in June, 1330, but was killed by the Moors in Andalusia in August; his companions returned with the casket containing the heart which was deposited at Melrose, but the mission of Douglas is commemorated in the arms of the Earls of Douglas. He died unmarried and was succeeded by his brother Archibald, who married Dornagilla, daughter of John Cumyn, of Badenoch, by Marjory, sister of John Baliol, King of Scotland. They had John, who died abroad; William; and Eleanor, wife of Alexander Bruce, Earl of Carrich. (See Cumin VI.)

VI

WILLIAM DE DOUGLAS, son of Archibald and Dornagilla (Cumyn) de Douglas, obtained the family estates in 1342. He was educated in France, but returned to Scotland in 1346. He was present at the parliament held at Edinburgh, September 26, 1357, as Lord Douglas; being created Earl of Douglas, February 4, 1356-57. He married (first) Lady Margaret, daughter of Donald, twelfth Earl of Mar. (See Mar VI.) He married (second) Lady Margaret, oldest daughter of Patrick, ninth Earl of Dunbar and March. He married (third) Lady Margaret Stewart, Countess of Angus.

VII

JOAN DOUGLAS, daughter of William, first Earl of Douglas, married William, fifth Lord Dacre, son of Hugh de Dacre. (See Dacre VI.)

 CRAWFORD

Arms—Gules, a fess ermine.

From the barony of Crawford in Lanarkshire, the surname Crawford is derived.

I

GALFRIDUS DE CRAWFORD, the earliest of the family on record, is witness to a charter of Roger, Bishop of St. Andrews, to the Abbacy of Kelso, about 1189 and to another charter of Roger, who died in 1202.

II

REGINALD DE CRAWFORD, apparently son of Galfridus de Crawford, is witness to a charter of Richard le Bard to the monastery of Kelso, in 1128, with his sons William, John and Adam.

III

SIR JOHN DE CRAWFORD, son of Reginald de Crawford, and designated dominus de eodom (that is, Lord of Crawford) in several donations to the monasteries of Kelso and Newbottle, died in 1248, leaving two daughters, the youngest of whom married David de Lindesay, ancestor of the Earls of Crawford.

IV

MARGARET DE CRAWFORD, oldest daughter of Sir John de Crawford, married Archibald de Duglas, ancestor of the Earls of Douglas. (See Douglas II.)

 MAR

Arms—Azure, a bend between six cross crosslets, fitchée or.

Crest—Two wings of ten pen feathers, bearings arms as in the shield.

Mar, which gave its name to what is now claimed to be the oldest existing Scottish title, included the greater part of the present Aberdeenshire. Donald, son of Emlim, son of Cainnech, was the Mormaer or Great Steward of Mar, who fell at the battle of Clontarf as an ally of King Brian Boroimke against the Danes, A. D. 1014. He was said to be of the Norse race of old Ivar, and of the clan Leod of Arran; but we do not know that Ruadri or “Rotheri Comes” or Earl, also styled Mormaer, who gives consent to the foundation charter of the Abbey of Scone between 1114 and 1124, was a descendant of Donald.

I

MORGUND, witness to a charter by King David I, between 1147 and 1152, is the next Earl on record. He appears also in a charter by King Malcolm IV in or after 1154 as Morgund Comes; and before 1178 he and his wife granted the church of Migvie to the Priory of St. Andrews, of which he had previously been a considerable benefactor. He is referred to as dead in a bull by Pope Lucius III, dated March 30, 1183, dying probably in 1182.

He left sons: Malcolm; James; Duncan, who became Earl of Mar; Donald; David; and John. (Gilchrist is the next Earl of Mar on record, all the charters in which he appears being between 1182 and 1211. He married Orabile, daughter of Nes, son of William, who styles herself Countess of Mar in a writ before August 20, 1199. She had been before 1155 apparently the wife of Robert de Quincy and was certainly mother of Saer de Quincy, created Earl of Winchester, who refers to her as his mother in a charter dated before 1200. She died before June, 1203.)

II

DUNCAN, who describes himself as son of Earl Morgund and Countess Agnes, and also as heir of Morgund. He is styled "Earl Duncan, son of Morgunt" in a royal charter of August 29, 1228. He died between 1242 and February 7, 1243-44.

III

WILLIAM, son of Duncan, succeeded his father before February 7, 1243-44, when he witnesses a royal charter as Earl of Mar. He was Great Chamberlain of Scotland from 1252 to September, 1255, and again 1262 to 1267. He died before July 25, 1281. He married (first) Elizabeth, daughter of William Comyn (Cumin), Earl of Buchan. She died in 1267 and he married (second) Muriel, daughter of Malise, Earl of Strathearn. She died in 1291, without issue.

IV

DONALD, son of William, Earl of Mar, and Elizabeth Comyn, received knighthood from King Alexander III, at Scone, September 29, 1270; and appears as Earl of Mar, July 25, 1281, as one of the magnates who agreed to the marriage of the Princess Margaret with Eric of Norway; and also one who on February 5, 1283-84, acknowledged their daughter heir to the Scottish throne. He was an ardent supporter of Robert Bruce. He did homage to Edward I of England July 10, 1296, but died soon after July 25, 1297, when he wrote to Edward I. He married Helen or Elen, daughter of Llewellyn, Prince of North Wales, and widow of Malcolm, Earl of Fife, who died in 1266. They had Gartnet or Gratney; Duncan; Alexander; Isabel; and Marjory.

V

GARTNET (or GRATNEY), son of Donald, Earl of Mar, and Helen, Countess of Fife, is first referred to as Garthnet, son of the Earl of Mar, in a letter from King Edward of date June 11, 1297. It was probably soon after this that he succeeded his father. He died before 1305. He married Christian Bruce, sister of King Robert Bruce, to whom he was thus united by a double tie. She married (second) Sir Christopher Seton; (third) Sir Andrew Moray. Gartnet had by her a son Donald and a daughter Ellen, who married between 1320 and 1323, John, afterwards Sir John Mentieth, Lord of Arran, and through her daughter Christian, she was ancestress of the Erskine Earls of Mar.

VI

DONALD, son of Gartnet, Earl of Mar, and Christian Bruce, was brought up in Bristol, England, and his residence was in England mainly until 1327. In 1327-28 and 1328-29, he had charters from King Robert Bruce of the thanage of Clova in Forfarshire, and Satklyn in Fifeshire, and after Bruce's death, he was elected, August 2, 1332, as regent of Scotland, in succession to Thomas Randolph, Earl of Moray. He was killed at the battle of Dupplin, August 12, 1332. He married Isabel Stewart, and had Thomas, Earl of Mar, and Margaret. Thomas married (first) Margaret, daughter of Sir John Graham, Earl of Mentieth; and (second) Margaret, daughter of Thomas Stewart, Earl of Angus, but died between October, 1372, and June 21, 1374, without issue.

VII

MARGARET, daughter of Donald, Earl of Mar, and Isabel Stewart, and direct heir of her brother Thomas, was married before November 13, 1357, to Sir William Douglas, of Douglas, in January, 1358, created Earl of Douglas; and on the death of Thomas, Earl of Mar, he styles himself Earl of Douglas and Mar, the latter title in right of his wife. (See Douglas VI.)

Keith

Arms—Argent, on a chief gules, three palets or.

Crest—A hart's head erased proper, armed with ten tynes or.

Supporters—Two harts proper attired as in the crest.

Motto—Veritas vincit. (Truth conquers.) Behind the shield two batons gules, semee of thistles ensigned on the top with an imperial crown or, placed saltireways, as badges of the office of Great Marischal of Scotland.

N origin the Scottish family of Keith derived its name from the barony of Keith in East Lothian, said to have been granted by Malcolm II, King of Scotland, to a member of the house for services against the Danes. The office of Great Marischal of Scotland, afterwards hereditary in the Keith family, may have been conferred at the same time, for it was confirmed, together with possession of the lands of Keith, to Sir Robert Keith by a charter of King Robert Bruce, and appears to have been held as annexed to the land by the tenure of grand serjeanty.

I

HERVENS, son of Warin, witnessed charters of David I, King of Scotland, particularly his grant of Annandale to Robert de Brus. He possessed half of the district of Keith, which was therefore called Keith Hervei, or Hervens Keith, and Symon Fraser possessed the other half, called Keith Symon.

II

HERVENS DE KETH (or KEITH), son of Hervens, son of Warin, adopted his name from his estate of Keith, and held the office of King's Marischal under Malcolm IV and William I. He witnessed several charters of William the Lion before 1196, about which year he died.

III

MALCOLM DE KETH (or KEITH) is recorded in a donation to the monastery of Arbroath in 1178, as son of Hervens de Keth, Great Marischal of Scotland. He was on record as a witness 1185, but as he is never called Great Marischal, probably died before his father did. He left sons Philip and David, the latter associated in 1201-1220 with the former, as marischal.

IV

PHILIP DE KEITH, oldest son of Malcolm de Keth, succeeded his grandfather, as he is designated Great Marischal in a donation to the monastery of Arbroath, about 1195, and in several authentic writs before 1214. He died before 1220. He married Eda, daughter and heiress of Hugh Lokens by Eda, daughter of Symon Fraser of Keith Symon, and thus acquired the other half of the district of Keith.

V

HERVENS DE KEITH, son of Phiip de Keith is designated great marischal of cotland, son of Philip, great marischal in a donation to the monastery of Coldingham, in 1222, and confirmed the grants of the church of Keith made by Symon Fraser, ratified by Alexander II, 1238. He died soon after 1242.

VI

SIR JOHN DE KEITH, son of Hervens de Keith is designated great marischal in confirmations of the charters granted by his father, and added some lands to his estate of Keith, by charter granted about 1250. He died before 1270. He married a daughter of the Earl of Buchan, and had sons Sir William (or Robert); Adam, rector of Keith Marischal in 1292; and probably a third son, father of Sir William Keith of Galstoun in Ayrshire, and ancestor of the Keiths of Galstoun; and Robert, probably marischal.

VII

SIR WILLIAM DE KEITH, oldest son of Sir John de Keith, witnessed a charter of Malcolm, Earl of Lennox, in 1270, but died before 1290. He married Barbara, daughter of Serlo (or Secher) de Seton, and had sons: Sir Robert, Sir Richard, Sir Edward, and Philip, rector of Biggar; also a daughter.

VIII

——— DE KEITH, daughter of Sir William de Keith, married William de Douglas, called "the Hardy." (See Douglas IV.)

 SETON

Arms—Or, three crescents gules.

According to Douglas, the surname Sayton, or Seton, is derived from the estate granted to Secher de Say by David I in East Lothian. Maitland gives his father's name as Dougall.

I

SECHER DE SAY came into Scotland in the reign of David I, who died in 1153. King David granted to him an estate called after him Saytoun. Douglas considers Alexander de Seton, who witnessed a charter of David I to William de Riddell of lands in Roxburghshire as son of Secher, but Alexander is omitted by Sir Bernard Burke in recent editions of his "Peerage and Baronetage," and makes Philip succeed Secher de Say.

II

ALEXANDER DE SETON, son (according to Douglas) of Secher de Say and proprietor of Seton, Winton and Winchburgh, died at the end of the reign of Malcolm IV.

III

PHILIP DE SETON, son of Alexander, according to a charter from King William I of the lands of Seton, Winton and Winchburgh, "quae fuit," Alexandri de Seton, Sin patris, witnessed by David, Earl of Huntingdon and others, died before 1203, having Alexander, Thomas and Richard, and a daughter Emma.

IV

SIR ALEXANDER SETON, of Seton, oldest son of Philip de Seton, is called son of Philip in the chartularies of Dunfermline and Aberbrothwick. The earliest Seton seal is his, about 1216, bearing three crescents and a label of three points. He witnessed charters of William II, especially in 1226, and died at the end of the reign of Alexander II. He married Margaret, daughter of Walter de Barclay, Chamberlain of Scotland.

V

SERLO, or SECHER DE SETON, son of Sir Alexander and Margaret (de Barclay) de Seton, witnessed with Malcolm, Earl of Fife, a donation of Alexander de Unyeth to the monastery of Dunfermline in 1254; and with Alexander, his son witnessed a charter to the monastery of Holyrood House in 1263, and Alexander witnessed again 1265. He had two sons, Sir Alexander, and Sir John, who swore fealty to Edward I, 1296, and a daughter Barbara.

VI

BARBARA DE SETON, daughter of Serlo (or Secher) de Seton, married Sir William Keith, Great Marischal of Scotland. (See Keith VII.)

 CUMIN

Arms—Azure, three garbs or.

Comyn, Cumin, modern Cumming was the name of a Scottish clan located at Badenoch, County Inverness. The family came from County Northumberland, England, into Scotland in the reign of David I, died 1153.

I

RICHARD CUMIN, nephew of William Cumin, high chancellor of Scotland, 1130-1142, assisted his uncle in holding the see of Durham from 1140 to 1144, when he surrendered it to William de St. Barbara, the lawful bishop, and obtained from the latter the honor and castle of North Allerton. He inherited the family estate in Northumberland, and obtained from Earl Henry, son of David I, the manor of Linton Roderick in Roxburghshire, the first possession the Cumins had in Scotland. He was chief minister of William the Lion, and was taken prisoner with him at Alnwick in 1174, and in 1175 was one of the sureties that William should fulfill the terms of his liberation. He acted as justiciary of Scotland from 1178 to about 1189, when he died. He married Hexilda (or Hextilda), daughter of Bethoc, who was daughter of Donald Bane, King of Scotland. They had sons: William, John, and Od.

II

WILLIAM CUMIN, son of Richard and Hextilda Cumin, succeeded to his father's estates in Northumberland and Scotland, and acquired from William the Lion the manor of Lennach (Lenzie) and Kirkintulloch, in Dumbartonshire. He was Sheriff of Forfer, and was justiciary of Scotland in 1209. In 1210 he became Earl of Buchan, by his marriage with Marjory, Countess of Buchan. He died in 1233. He had by his first marriage sons Richard and Walter, who became Earl of Monteith, and by his second, sons Alexander, Earl of Buchan; William, and Fergus; and a daughter Elizabeth, who married William, Earl of Mar, and died in 1267.

III

RICHARD CUMIN, oldest son of William Cumin, succeeded to his father's estates; witnessed several charters and died probably in 1249.

IV

JOHN CUMIN, popularly called "Red John," son of Richard Cumin, acted a conspicuous part during the minority of Alexander III until 1255, and again in 1257 in governing Scotland, and was justiciary of Galloway in 1258. He was the first Cumin to be called the Earl of Badenoch. He was married twice and left at least four sons and four daughters: William, John, Alexander, and Sir Robert. His daughters married, respectively, Richard Seward; Godfrey Mowbray; Alexander of Argyll; and ———

Moray, Lord of Moray, and father of Sir Andrew Moray of Bothwell. William succeeded his father, but died childless, 1290-91.

V

JOHN CUMIN, second son of "Red John" Cumin, was called "Black John" Cumin, of Badenoch. He was one of the Scottish magnates engaged to maintain the title of Margaret, daughter of Alexander II to the throne of Scotland, on her grandfather's death. After that in 1286 he was chosen one of the six guardians of the kingdom. He died soon after November, 1299. He married Marjory, daughter of John Baliol, of Barnard Castle, and sister of John Baliol, King of Scotland. (See second line of Baliol VI.)

VI

DORNAGILLA CUMIN, daughter of "Black John" Cumin and Marjory (Baliol) Cumin, married Archibald Douglas, son of William Douglas, "the Hardy." (See Douglas V.)
