WILLIAM MARTIN WRIGHT

Since preparing this book and before it was taken to print, William Wright passed to that Rest beyond, April 14, 1911. The last request he made on his death-bed was that I, his daughter, would complete the work he had so near done and have it published.

PREFACE

The desire of the present generation to know something of their ancestors, and knowing I had some record gathered many years ago, they prevailed on me to write this booklet, in which I deal with plain facts only with no flatulence. The family were hard workers in the settling of the new country, which must have caused many privations and hardships of which we can give no account as they never complained nor boasted of what they had done. "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves;...Not of works, lest any man should boast."--Eph.II;8,9.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I AM INDEBTED for much to Thomas K. Wright, of Culpepper County, Virginia, a well educated man, a lawyer, and a Prohibition lecturer, who, after the Civil War, moved to Indiana and spent the last few years of his life in Adams County, near Berne. He was a grandson of a brother of Zadok Wright, my great-grandfather.

Also to Uncle John Wright, of Wayne County, Indiana and Aunt Margaret (Wright) Brown, through her daughter, Lucy B. Johnston, of Topeka, Kansas and Henry Porter Bradbury, of Springfield, Ohio, and many others.

THE WRIGHT FAMILY

THE name Wright originated in Germany, from a man working in wood (a carpenter), called wright, now chiefly used in compounds, as millwright, wheelwright, shipwright, etc. The descendants of this carpenter, called Wright, had to flee from Germany to save their lives when the Catholics were persecuting the Protestants. There were three brothers, John, Thomas, and David Wright, who went to England. John settled on the Isle of Wite; Thomas on the Isle of Man; and David, in Scotland. Their descendants emigrated to America and settled in Culpepper County, Virginia, and other parts of the United States, as will be seen by the following.

The Wright family has been prominent in England for several generations, especially in Suffolk, Kent, Surrey, Warwick, and Durham. Cranham Hall, Essex, is one seat of the Wrights, and Bilham House, York, another. The Irish branch of the family was established by Ireland Wright, who went with Cromwell to that kingdom.

One of the first of whom we have any record was John, Lord of Kelvedon Manor, Essex. He died in 1551. His son was Robert of the Moat House, and Lord of the Manor of Great and Little Ropers. His direct descendant was Thomas, whom we find deputy to the general court at Wethersfield, Conn., in 1643, whose wife was Margaret, widow of John Elson.

An earlier pilgrim father was William who came over in the "Fortune," 1621, with his wife Priscilla.

In 1645, Benjamin, who had come from England, was a large land owner at Guilford, Conn. He was granted permission to put up a tan mill, "take water yt issueth from ye waste gate, provided it hurt not ye town mill." He had nine children, and from him descended Silas, Governor of New York and United States Senator, and William, Governor of New Jersey, and also Senator.

Nicholas, who was living at Lynn, Massachusetts, in 1637, was a surveyor, a large land owner, and town schepen or magistrate. He also held many other offices of civil trust.

The Wrights have a notable record as Governors of States: Besides Silas and William, already mentioned, there was Sir James Wright, the last royal Governor of Georgia. He was born in South Carolina, 1714, and son of Benjamin, who was from Durham, England. Robert Wright was Governor of Maryland, and Joseph of Indiana.

Silas Wright was born at Amherst, Massachusetts, May 24, 1795. He graduated from Middlebury College, Vermont, in 1815, was admitted to the bar in 1819, and began practice at Canton, in northern New York. This place where he settled was almost a wilderness. His farm was a small one, and no hired laborer upon it worked harder than he did. His manner of life was of the simplest. In his professional work he was a type of a lawyer of the old school--shrewd, skillful, rigidly just, and controlled by the belief that his profession was a public trust and that judicial qualities must mingle with those of the advocate. He is said never to have sought an office and never felt at liberty to refuse one, even that of village postmaster, if he could possibly serve. He was appointed surrogate in 1820 and was elected successively to the State Senate in 1823, to the House of Representatives in 1827-29, Comptroller of the State 1829-33, United States Senator 1833-44, and Governor of New York 1844-46. During his public life he had become a leader of the Democratic party in New York, Van Buren being his closest associate. When the national Democratic party in 1844 nominated and elected Polk to the presidency, instead of Van Buren, Wright and the State Organization took an attitude of armed neutrality towards the new administration. Renominated for Governor in 1846, Wright was defeated and the result was ascribed to the hostility of the Polk administration. The death of the defeated candidate, August 27, 1847, at Canton, gave intense bitterness to New York politics for several years, and his faction, in 1848, succeeded in defeating their national party's candidates in the presidential election.

Nathaniel Wright, an active member of Winthrop's colony, was a London merchant, who owned one-eighth of the ships that brought the colonists to America, which country he never visited. Thomas, of Wethersfield; was of the same family, and Nathaniel's half-brother, Samuel, was ancestor of the Springfield, Massachusetts branch.

The brothers, Peter and Anthony, were progenitors of the Long Island Wrights. The deed of their land purchase in 1677 from the Indians shows that the consideration was six Indian coats, six kettles, 6 fathoms of wampum, 6 hoes, 6 hatchets three pairs of stockings, thirty awl blades, twenty knives, three shirts, and as much peas as would amount to £4. A portion of this land has been owned and occupied by the Wrights ever since.

The first Quaker meeting was held at Anthony Wright's house, and a house of worship erected on his grounds was paid for in Indian corn, pork, and peas.

One of the founders of Methodism in this country, was Richard Wright, who came over with Francis Asbury, in 1771.

In 1736, Thomas Hynson Wright, a surveyor for Lord Baltimore, was one of the delegates to the assembly at Annapolis. His son, Colonel Thomas, was delegate to the Colonial Convention of 1775, a member of the association of freemen who protested against infringements of their liberty and the first military commander of Maryland forces under Revolutionary organization.

Major Samuel Turbutt Wright, also of the Maryland family, was a hero of the Revolution and one of the principal leaders at the battle of Long Island, where it was that the valor of Maryland's "400" shone so gloriously. The Sons of the Revolution of that State have commemorated the bravery of the heroic band by the erection of a monolith at Brooklyn.

Revolutionary rosters give the names of Lieutenant Nahum, wounded at Bunker Hill; Surgeon Elihu, of Massachusetts; Lieutenant Dudley and Lieutenant Ebenezer, of Connecticut; Captain Robert and Lieutenant Daniel, of New York; Lieutenant Anthony, of Pennsylvania; Lieutenant Benjamin, of Maryland; Lieutenant David, of North Carolina; and Captain John, of Georgia. His son, Benjamin, won laurels in the War of 1812.

Dr. Thomas, of the Long Island family, one of the most eminent surgeons of his day, although an old man at the time of the Revolution, took part, and died in prison, his body being thrown into one of the trenches in the rear of the present City Hall, New York, known as the Graves of the Martyrs. His body was re-interred in Trinity Cemetery. Dr. Thomas was an ardent patriot and served on board the privateer Grayhound during King George's war, 1744-1748.

Stephen Wright, and his partner, Charles Brown, built the first steamboat, the Clermont, for its inventor, Robert Fulton, in 1807.

Joseph Wright, styled Wright of Derby, subject, landscape and portrait painter, was born at Derby, September 3, 1734, the son of an attorney of the place, who was afterwards town clerk. During his early years he manifested an aptitude for mechanical pursuits, and also for music, but he finally resolved to become a painter and in 1751, he went to London and for two years studied under Thomas Hudson, the Master of Reynolds. Returning to Derby, he practiced portrait painting; but feeling the need for further instruction he again placed himself for fifteen months under his former master. He then settled in Derby and varied his work in portraiture by the production of the subject seen under artificial light, with which his name is chiefly associated, and by landscape painting. He married in 1773 and in the end of that year, he visited Italy where he remained till 1775.

While in Naples he witnessed an eruption of Vesuvius, which under various treatment formed the subject of many of his subsequent pictures. On his return from Italy he established himself at Bath as a portrait painter; but meeting with but little encouragement he returned to Derby, where he spent the rest of his life. He was a frequent contributor to the exhibitions of the Society of Artists and to those of the Royal Academy, of which he was elected an associate in 1781 and a full member in 1784. He, however, declined the latter honor on account of slight which he believed that he had received and severed his official connection with the Academy, though he continued to contribute to the exhibitions from 1783 till 1794. He died at Derby on August 29, 1797. An exhibition of Wrights work was brought together at Derby in 1883, and twelve of his pictures were shown in the winter exhibition of the Royal Academy in 1886.

Thomas Wright was born in Ludlow, in Shropshire, April 21, 1810, and was descended from a Quaker family formerly living at Bradford, in Yorkshire. He was a great scholar and antiquary. He helped to found the British Archaeological Association. Edward Wright, living in the seventeenth century, was a mathematician of note.

Characteristics of the family are truth and honor. Rare executive ability, a strong sense of justice, firmness combined with courtesy and affability, and other traits, to which may be added patriotism, military ardor and a self-sacrificing spirit. Always taking the environments of others into consideration, they were ready to lend a helping hand to those sinking morally or financially, but never had a word of praise or encouragement for those who by their environments were able to oppress those more unfortunate. Length of years have been rewards for upright living and the Wrights have numbered many centenarians in their ranks. It is recorded of one that when an old man -- in the neighborhood of ninety -- he went out one day to mow with the young men, but sat down to weep when he found that he could not keep up with the others.

OUR BRANCH OF THE FAMILY

My great-grandfather, Zadock Wright, with other near relatives, came from England and settled in Culpepper County, Virginia. My great-grandfather lived there until his death. He was of a military turn of mind and boasted of his attainments as a cavalier. The story is handed down to us of an occasion when he, all booted and spurred, made an attempt to mount a very high-spirited horse. Two colored servants were in attendance, one at the head of the horse, the other to adjust the stirrup. Aidecamp Wright gave a spring, his spurred foot struck the horse before he had proper command of the bridle, the horse sprang forward, the servants were both knocked down, the horse ran away and the "cavalier" was left sitting in the dirt.

Great-grandfather had five sons and two daughters, the eldest son was John, then Thomas, James and Lewis, then a daughter Lucy, then William (my grandfather); born in 1762, then Sarah. In the year 1773, John moved near Red Sand Stone Fort on the Monongahala, in Pennsylvania. Afterwards he returned to Culpepper County, Virginia, and brought his mother and all his brothers and sisters to where he had settled. Some few years later John moved to Kentucky. He did not stay there long until he moved over into the State of Ohio. At last, they all, except Lewis, moved to Ohio. William was the last to come. He settled sixteen or eighteen miles north of Cincinnati, in the year 1809.

Albert Wright, who is now in the United States mail service, Springfield, Ohio, is the great-grandson of _____ Wright, who built the canal from Bristolshire to the English Channel, England, in 1795-1803. This civil engineer who was superintendent of the canal for a number of years after its construction, was a first cousin to our grandfather, William Wright, born 1762.

I shall give a little sketch of the life of the last one of Grandfather Wright's family to show how the early life of the pioneers was. Margaret Wright was born April 13, 1803, in Green County, Pennsylvania. Her father, William Wright, was of English descent and her mother, Margaret Phillips Wright, of German descent. Her father John Phillips, was born in Germany, on the bank of the Rhine, so near the river that they could look over into France. Margaret Wright was but a small child when her father William Wright, emigrated to Ohio, and bought a farm now within the corporate limits of Cincinnati. The journey from Pennsylvania was made principally by flat boat. The little girl always remembered the new home and the village of Cincinnati, then only a few log houses. Mr. Wright soon sold this hilly farm for one of the fine bottom land of the Miami Valley, Butler County. Here, when Margaret was only nine years old and the eldest of the two daughters at home, her mother died. The home was kept for a short time and then Margaret went to live with her sister, Lucy Bradbury, in Camden, Preble County, and Elizabeth, two years younger, was taken into the home of another sister, Mary Simcox, Hamilton, Ohio. Then William Wright, who had been a soldier in the Revolutionary War again volunteered his services, this time in the War of 1812. Margaret remained in Camden until her sister and her family moved to Michigan. She journeyed with them as far as Centerville, Indiana, where she remained with her eldest brother, John, while her sister's family made the long journey to Niles, Michigan in a covered wagon.

Soon after this Margaret married Robert Henning Brown, of Camden, Ohio, who was born December 13, 1802, in Newry, County Down, Ireland. Mr. Brown was the village storekeeper, but went on a farm to rear his family. In 1872, he retired from the farm and lived in Camden, where he died November 14, 1883. Soon after Mrs. Brown went to Kansas to visit her children. She returned twice to stay, but her attachments in Kansas were too strong and each time she returned to that State. After the death of her eldest daughter, Margaret, whose home was in Preble County, she had no desire to go back to Ohio again. Her last journey was made in comfort when she was in her ninety-second year. She was a happy, cheerful and much beloved member of the family of Judge and Mrs. William Agnew Johnston, and died in their home, 700 Topeka Avenue, Topeka, Kansas, October 25, 1900 aged 97 years 6 months and 12 days. Her funeral services were held in the Presbyterian Church, of Camden, Ohio, where she was an honored member for more than sixty-five years, and she was laid to rest beside her husband in the cemetery north of Camden.

There were many changes affecting the lives of women during the period of Mrs. Brown's life—almost a hundred years. When little Margaret Wright grew to school age the public school was not open to her simply because she was a girl, except of summer evenings after the boys had gone home. But she was taught knitting, fine sewing, spinning and embroidery. Once, when her father lived in Pennsylvania, he had to take his family into Red Sand Stone Fort for some time. He had to go out to hunt and fight Indians, and her mother thought he ought to have warm stockings so she sheared the wool off their little dog and knit him a pair of stockings.

Margaret was a fine horse-woman and her wedding journey was made on horseback, the groom bringing a little bay mare to Centerville for her to ride back. The "Infair" dinner was served at the village Inn, and one of the meats was a whole roasted pig which held a red apple in its mouth. When Mrs. Brown went to housekeeping, the baking was done in an out-oven and the cooking on a crane over an open fire. She was proud of having the first cooking-stove in the county, a "step stove." There were no Lucifer matches and fire had to be kept over or borrowed from the neighbors. All table furnishings, bed furnishings and wearing apparel were woven and made in the home.

Margaret Brown was a "Real daughter" of "The Daughters of the American Revolution" and was an active member in the Temperance Crusade in Ohio, out of which the Woman's Christian Temperance Union grew. She was small of stature, had black eyes and fine black hair. She was lovingly called "Aunt Peggy" or "Grandma Brown" by a host of children and grownups who could not claim the legal right.

The following record will enable any of the descendants to become either "Sons" or "Daughters" of the American Revolution:
