ABBE. This name is listed in Bardsley's "English Surnames" as a "surname of office."

"Ralph le Abbe" appears in the Calendarium Rotulorum Patentium in Turri Londinensi.

The name is found in old records spelled Abbe, Abbee, Abbei, Abbie, Abbye, and Abby.

1. John Abbe, first of the American family, arrived in Salem and was granted land there in November, 1636. He received further grants in 1638, 1639 and in 1642, and on December 15, 1642-3, was granted land at Enon, now Wenham.

In 1683 he disposed of his estate by dividing it among his children. His first wife, Mary ———, died in Wenham, September 9, 1672. His second wife, Mary Goldsmith, whom he married November 25, 1674, was probably the widow of Richard Goldsmith. His second marriage took place in Wenham, as did his death, which occurred about 1689.

THE ABBE GENEALOGY.

Of this family there was a Joseph Abbe, of Ipswich, who married Thomasin or Tamazin, daughter of William Baker, of Ipswich (Pub. November 5, 1721). He lived in the house in which the late W. K. Bell, Esq., resided, near the town house, which he is said to have built; and was a blacksmith by trade, having a shop called "Abbe the smith's shop," in which considerable work was prosecuted. He was living in Ipswich in 1749, when he sold his house, blacksmith's shop and land. His children were born in Ipswich.
