THE ROLL OF HONOR
OF THE
SEVENTEENTH PENNSYLVANIA CAVALRY, OR
ONE-HUNDRED-AND-SIXTY-SECOND OF THE LINE, PENNA. VOLS., IS RESPECTFULLY DEDICATED TO THE VETERANS OF THE REGIMENT.

PREFACE.

ACTUATED by the single desire of perpetuating, in an humble manner, the untarnished record of the Regiment, the names of comrades, the number and date of engagements associated with its history, that they may be carried with us to our thousand homes, I have dedicated the "Roll of Honor" to the Regiment and its Friends. It does not embrace a history of its operations; nor is it thought desirable that it should at this time. The roll of years will not render remote the honorable part it has played in the great struggle for Freedom, and the perpetuity of Self-Government. The future hues of time will but add lustre to its noble achievements, and when the true historian, "the faithful chronicler of the grave," seeks, in the light of official and impartial record, he will find ample testimony acknowledging its services, and a grateful Republic to read and appreciate them. For the hasty manner in which these preparations have necessarily been made, we ask the kind forbearance of the "Veteran," and promise to enlarge and correct upon a future edition.

Very respectfully,

THEO. W. BEAN,

Captain Co. L., Brevet Lt.-Colonel U. S. Vols.

ROLL OF HONOR

OF THE

SEVENTEENTH PENNSYLVANIA CAVALRY.

AMONG the regimental organizations of Sheridan's Cavalry, that marched up Pennsylvania Avenue, May 23d, 1865, in serried mass, to pass, perhaps for the last time, before the distinguished reviewing officers that represented our great Republic, none presented a more imposing appearance than the Seventeenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, or One Hundred and Sixty-second of the Line of Pennsylvania Volunteers. No regiment that passed in that memorable column, before the admiring eyes of a grateful people, has a nobler record to carry with them home to the patriotic Executive, under whose auspices it was organized and constantly watched over while in the field, and to the loved ones who patiently awaited its return, that they might welcome the veteran patriots to the homes they left in the darkest hour of our country's peril. They came into the service of their country in response to the call of July 2d, 1862, for three years' volunteers; they came to fill the depleted ranks resulting from the unfortunate Peninsular campaign—and nobly they have done it.

Without the popular and fascinating encouragement of excessive local and national bounties, they left their peaceful and happy homes among the hills and vallies of their mother State, and offered themselves a living sacrifice upon the shrine of a loved and honored Republic. Aged fathers and pious mothers bade farewell to their noblest sons. Wives emulated the heroic example of their patriotic mothers during the Revolution of '76, and locked hands with cherished sisters and lovely maidens, in waving a tearful farewell—which, alas! in many instances, was the last that was to be given on earth—as they left each city, town, and village, to join their destiny with the grand Army of the Potomac. And, too, we cannot forget that it was at a period in the progress of this war when "Cavalry" was at a fearful discount—when it was said of them, that they were the "contempt of the enemy and the terror of their friends." Every veteran in the Regiment can doubtless recall the trifling importance attached to that arm of the service during our first campaign in "Muddy Stafford." To be driven in was to be branded as cowards; to be captured was equivalent to dismissal; and to be killed was a joke. The uselessness, comparatively, of the cavalry at that period, is not to be denied; but it arose chiefly from a most lamentable want of skill and judgment in using it—fighting it in small detachments, which the enemy could invariably overcome by the most ordinary combinations. The "Cavalry fight" at Kelley's Ford, on the 17th of March, 1863, suggested, among other reasons, the necessity of massing it in division and corps organizations, and putting in command of it live Generals. And from that time to the close of the war, they have won for that arm of the service an imperishable renown.

This Regiment was brigaded in the month of January, 1863, in the Second Brigade of the First Cavalry Division (Army of the Potomac), commanded then by Colonel, now Brevet Major-General, Thomas C. Devin, and has never been transferred during its term of three years. With this brigade it has been identified with all the engagements during the campaigns of 1863, 1864, and 1865. Inscribed upon its banners are the distinguishing battles of the war; its gallant dead lay buried upon every field, from the Rappahanock to the James, from Gettysburg to Appomattox Court House; its mutilated heroes have carried sorrow and solicitude to a thousand homes, and a score of its martyrs have been consigned to unknown, though not unhonored, graves, by the murderous hand of imbruted prison masters, who sought, by every cowardly and fiendish device that unparalleled depravity and wickedness could suggest, to destroy our lamented comrades when powerless—whom they dared not meet on a fair field, but to be vanquished.

Soldiers, you have triumphed! Under the eye of your distinguished commanders, inspired by their genius and valor, you have marched to victory over a hundred battle-fields. True to your colors, true to the glittering steel that has so often carried terror and dismay to the once haughty and insolent, but now fairly vanquished, enemy, you retire to the pursuits of civil life to share with your justly honored commanders, as you did the perils and dangers of the battle, the joy and blessing of a lasting and honorable peace.

You can recall with pride your experience at Chancellorsville. Being at that time mere novices in the service, you were placed in the most trying position, when the right wing of the army was routed, and its ruin eminent. It was your well-dressed lines, your glittering steel that shone like the shimmering river upon the banks of which the fearful contest was raging that awful night, that gave earnest proof of your zeal and devotion to the cause in which you had enlisted, and support and inspiration to the noble battery that checked the last effort of Stonewall Jackson to gain the road to United States Ford, with the loss of which the reverse would have been irreparable.

At Beverly Ford, where but half armed, you took the line of battle with your more fortunate comrades, and shared with them the dangers, as you did the achievements, of the day.

At Gettysburg you were identified with the noble First Division, led by the lamented Buford, which held at bay, from early dawn until midnight, the rebel hosts that were concentrating upon us, and saved the glorious hills, at the partial sacrifice of the town, on which was established finally and forever the prowess and valor of the great American army.

Where the tide of the great invasion was checked, where our homes and firesides were freed from the scourge of a traitorous foe, where the safety of our State and National Capital was secured, where the minions of secession met the most sanguine repulse of the war, and the life of the rebellion rendered, beyond all doubt, only a question of time, in the pursuit that followed, at Williamsport, Boonsborough, Falling Waters, Brandy Station, and Racoon Ford, you were ever at your post of duty. At the latter place, you left your horses under shelter and rushed to the support of your brother comrades in arms (Fourth New York Cavalry,) who were gallantly struggling against fearful odds, and under a murderous fire of grape and canister from the enemy, saved them from capture, re-established the line, and held it until relieved by the Twelfth Army Corps; for which you received, as you deserved, the especial commendation of the division commander. In the subsequent movements of the same year, when the wily rebel chief proposed to flank the army of the Potomac, and thus gain possession of the Capital, history will accord to the regiment an honorable association with the commands that beat back his advance at Morton's Ford, Stephensburg, Brandy Station, and Oak Hill, where holding the extreme left of the line, you skillfully changed front as a distinctive organization by direction of your immediate commander, anticipating a well intended surprise, and repulsing with heavy loss, a reckless charge of cavalry, for which the enemy at that time were notorious. In the counter movements of the campaign, closing with the battle of Bealton Station and Rickseyville, the occupation of the line on the Rapidan and the indecisive engagement at Mine Run, the Regiment was present bearing its share of the toils and sustaining its proportion of losses, and, with the command, went into winter quarters on the battle-beaten plains of Culpeper. Resting until the following spring, on the 4th of May, 1864, you bade farewell to the rude huts and houses that had kindly sheltered you from the piercing blasts of a bitter winter, and with the brave one hundred thousand strong, marched upon the boasted line of strength that had for three successive campaigns defied and baffled the best efforts of the nation.

The bloody battles of the Wilderness were fought, but not without you. Among the forty thousand killed and wounded of the conflict, you were mournfully represented by our dead and suffering wounded. These battles fought, this line taken, the new position secured, you started under the eagle eye of "Cavalry Sheridan" to raid the enemy's rear, cut his communications and threaten his capital. Let the midnight conflagration at Beaver Dam Station, the death of Stuart, the route of his horsemen, the capture of the famous battery of "Baltimore Lights," the distant tolling bells that betrayed the alarm of the officials and fears of an excited populace in Richmond, with the hazardous night picket of the Seventeenth, placed in the very streets of the town, tell how rigidly the orders were executed. And, too, let not the veteran forget how coolly he construed the exploding torpedoes of the enemy into the welcome sounds of signal guns from our supposed approaching friends, but which morning betrayed as the novel means adopted by the enemy to insure our destruction. Then followed in rapid succession the engagements of Hanover town, Haas Shop, Cold Harbor, and Trivillion Station, and our subsequent return to the Army of the Potomac to find it beseiging the city of Richmond.

The demonstration of the rebel Early on the upper Potomac, caused the embarkation of the command with other troops for the defence of the Capital, and prosecution of the Valley campaign which followed. No nobler and more chivalrous deeds will be recorded in the history of this war than those performed by the cavalry in this brilliant campaign, which ended in the capture and dispersion of the entire rebel army under Early. This desirable result opened the way and suggested the opportunity for the famous raid to James River Canal via the White House to the lines in front of Petersburg, and, without doubt, hastened the operations commencing at Five Forks and closing with the surrender of Lee and his army at Appomattox Court House.

Soldiers, through these fiery and bloody campaigns you have ridden. You can look back upon them with pride and honor to yourselves and families, and review with pleasure and advantage your experience and associations in army life; and as you look back upon a lifetime crowded into the space of a few years by the force, importance, and magnitude of events, your pleasures will be enhanced to know that in no engagement, during no campaign, has your Regiment betrayed the confidence of its commanders in the field; or, if possible, its more cherished friends at home.

Headquarters First Cavalry Division, }
 ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, MAY 10, 1863. }

General Orders, No. 27.

The General Commanding takes this occasion to commend the conduct of the "Second Brigade" and "Martin's" Sixth Independent New York Battery, in the late engagement near "Chancellorville."

The distinguished gallantry of the Eighth Pennsylvania Regiment in charging the head of the enemy's column, advancing on the Eleventh Corps, on the evening of the second instant; the heroism of the Sixth New York Regiment in cutting its way back to our own lines through treble its force of the enemy's cavalry on the first instant; and the coolness displayed by the Seventeenth Pennsylvania Regiment in rallying fugitives, and supporting the batteries (including Martin's) which repulsed the enemy's attack under "Jackson," on the evening of the second instant, have excited the highest admiration.

These noble feats of arms recall the glorious days of "Middletown," "Boonsboro'," "Antietam," "Martinsburg," "Upperville," "Barber's," and "Amosville," where the First Brigade shared with us the triumphs of victory, and they will now, while exulting in this success, join in sorrow for the brave who have fallen.

The gallant "McVicar," the generous chivalric "Keenan," with one hundred and fifty killed and wounded from your small numbers, attest to the terrible earnestness that animated the midnight conflict of the "Second of May."

A. PLEASANTON,
Brigadier-General Commanding.

Headquarters Second Brigade, First Cavalry Div., }
MIDDLE MILITARY DIV., November 6, 1864. }

SOLDIERS:—The Brevet Brigadier-General commanding feels that he should not allow the present opportunity to pass without referring to, and recalling, the operations of his Brigade during the late engagements.

Rapidly transferred from the Army of the Potomac to the Shenandoah Valley, you, on the second day's march, engaged a brigade of mounted infantry, and in one hour drove them from two strong positions in utter rout. Again, at Front Royal, Smithfield, Kearneysville, and Shepherdstown, your sturdy arms and keen sabres on each occasion hurled back the serried masses of the foe. At the battle of the Opequan, after charging and routing a superior force of the enemy's cavalry in your front, you whirled like a thunderbolt on the left of his infantry lines, and rode them down in the face of a withering fire, in two successive charges, capturing over five hundred prisoners, and five battle-flags.

When detached from the Division, and in advance, during the long pursuits of Early's army from Fisher's Hill to Port Republic, your gallantry and daring while pressing the enemy called forth the highest praise. In the action of the ninth of October, taking the advance near Edinburg, you drove Lomax's Division "whirling" through Mount Jackson and across the Shenandoah, capturing his last gun and his train.

On the memorable nineteenth of October, the crowning glory was reserved for you of pursuing the enemy and reaping the fruits of that brilliant victory. After sturdily fighting from early morn with the gallant old Division to which you were attached, in its successful efforts to check and finally drive the enemy's right, you dashed across the bridge over Cedar Creek, under a heavy fire, charging and completely smashing the enemy's rear guard. Darkness did not relax your efforts, but on you pushed, capturing guns, trains, and prisoners, until at near midnight, you had reached Fisher's Hill, eight miles from the battle-field.

At early dawn you charged and drove the enemy's cavalry from the hill, and pushed on to Woodstock after the fast-flying foe, who could not again be overtaken.

Twenty-two of the forty-three guns captured by the cavalry, fifty-nine wagons and ambulances, over four hundred prisoners, (including a number of officers,) and two battle-flags, were the trophies of your success.

You have captured, during this short campaign, twenty-four guns, nine battle-flags in action, and over one thousand prisoners.

This brilliant success has not been effected without severe loss. One-third of your number, including forty officers, have been killed or wounded. They have fallen nobly at their post of duty.

Praise from me is superfluous. The record of your deeds is sufficient. You have done your duty, and the brigade has maintained its old reputation.

Signed,

THOMAS C. DEVIN,

Brevet Brigadier-General.

Headquarters First Cavalry Division, }
DEPT. OF WASHINGTON, June 21st, 1865. }

TO THE OFFICERS, NON-COMMISSIONED OFFICERS, AND PRIVATES OF THE SEVENTEENTH PENNSYLVANIA CAV-ALRY:—

Soldiers.:—In pursuance of orders for the reduction of the armies of the United States your regiment has, to a large extent, been honorably mustered out of service, the few who remain being consolidated with the Second Provisional Pennsylvania Cavalry.

But the Seventeenth Pennsylvania, though now of past, shall not be forgotten. In five successive campaigns, and in over threescore engagements, you have nobly sustained your part.

Of the many gallant regiments from your native State, none has a brighter record, none have more freely shed their blood on every battle-field from Gettysburg to Appomattox.

Your gallant deeds will be ever fresh in the memory of your comrades of the Iron Brigade and the First Division. Soldiers, farewell!

IN MEMORIAM.

COMRADES, we cannot forget our gallant dead, who had endeared themselves to us by every martial virtue, associated with the highest order of moral heroism and fraternal refinement; they, who in the prime and vigor of manhood, with the promise of auspicious years before them, to which their youth, health, and hopefulness justly warranted them in looking forward, were stricken down on the gory battle-field, victims of this cruel, this remorseless war. Nobler heroes never fell, nor fell for a holier cause.

In sorrow we buried the intrepid Shultz on the field he had fallen; in promise the gallant Anglun was stricken down, beloved by all; followed by Reinhold, a youth than whom none braver ever wielded a sword for the defence of right. A fatal bullet ended the bright career of Lee and Potter, whose daring invited upon a hundred fields the cruel fate that robbed a bleeding country of its brightest ornaments. Still later we record the fall of the brave Ham, on the very eve of victory; he gave his life for his country in the crowning struggle of the war, to the sorrow of every man and officer in the regiment.

Officers fell not alone; the brave carbineers who bared their breasts to each successive shock of battle, and gave their lives by scores to redeem an imperilled country, find equal honor in the patriot's grave. Our sorrow and solicitude ends not with the burial of our lamented companions in arms. It contemplates the home made desolate, the grief-stricken father and mother, who, in age and infirmity, were depending upon a promising son, and now mourns his untimely loss; it sympathises with the prayerful wife who gave her all, and now listens, with unutterable sorrow, to the prattling and unconscious child as it nightly asks for the return of father; it teaches us to cherish a profound respect for the patriot sister, the zealous brother, and all the associations that invited them to a useful and happy life.

Fallen patriots, the living veterans who have been spared, through the perils of three years of war, to witness that brilliant success that has given peace to our country will ever mourn you, believing the nation will honor you, and that God and posterity will reward you. Though you have fallen the Republic stands—stands a monument of your devotion and patriotism. Though your bodies lay upon the battle plains of Virginia, and the turf grows green over your unmarked graves, your deathless deeds will live as the wonder and admiration of this, as they will the soul of poetry and picture for all ages to come.
